SIRENS, PLANES SIGNAL START OF BOND DRIVE

'Kick-Off' To Be Tomorrow at Noon For County's Biggest Money-Raising Drive.

Blasts from the city's air raid sirens and the roar from a half dozen airplanes at noon tomorrow will start 5,000 Mansfield and Richland county war bond salesmen on the biggest money-raising venture ever attempted.

It will be the "kick-off" of a drive to sell $6,060,000 in war bonds in Richland county. That's the largest amount the county has yet been asked to raise because this time it is to come out of the pockets of each and every person. Banks will not be permitted to give the Third War Loan the boost they did the first and second drives.

Stores will open tomorrow at 9:45 a. m. as retail merchants and their employes launch their drive to raise $400,000 of the county quota with a mass meeting at Madison theater.

At 9 a. m. retail employes will meet at the theater where Fred Hout will explain the importance of each employe getting behind the drive to the fullest extent. W. L. Faulkner is general chairman of this event and of the retail merchants' drive.

"Back the Attack" is the slogan of the drive and that is just what each Richland countian is being asked to do to make the drive a success. State finance officials have estimated every man, woman and child in the state will have to purchase more than $100 worth of bonds and stamps if the drive quota is to be reached.

This means sacrifice on the part of every person, digging deep into pockets, dipping into savings, and perhaps going without that extra something you had planned to buy.

Council Grants $800 More for Port Appraisal

A supplemental appropriation of $800 was set up last night by city council to employ appraisers for the proposed city airport site, council slashing $200 from the $1,000 Mayor W. J. Locke had requested for the work.

The latest appropriation, with the $500 council set up several weeks ago to finance negotiations for the airport land, gives the mayor, service-safety director, and city engineer $1,300 for expenses incurred in appraising the 1,000 acres of land and negotiating for it. Actual purchase of the land is expected to cost nearly $100,000.

Mayor Locke, who previously announced he had three Mansfield real estate dealers in mind for the appraisal jobs, revealed today that one of them was Jack R. Balliett of the firm of Mayberry and Balliett. The mayor said he wanted to confer further with the other two men before announcing their names.

The mayor said it would cost $1,000 to hire the three real estate

6,095 Enroll As Schools Open In City

Attendance Figures On First Day 127 Higher Than Year Ago.

Mansfield school pupils were back at their desks in the city's 13 public schools today with an increase of 127 over last year's enrollment, and with a minimum of opening day confusion.

Total enrollment today was 6,095 as compared to 5,968 for the opening day last fall. Approximately 700 of these were first grade pupils starting to school for the first time.

Schedules at the county and parochial schools were in full swing this morning following their opening day yesterday.

Enrollment at grade schools in the city was: Bowman, 879; Brinkerhoff, 250; Bushnell, 186; Carpenter, 224; Hedges, 490; Newman, 374; Prospect, 225; Western, 298; West Fifth, 250, and Woodland, 143. Seventy-nine pupils were also entered in the special classes at Bushnell, Carpenter, and West Fifth street schools.

Senior high school's enrollment this morning was 1,143, which is lower than last year. John Simpson Junior high had 861, and Johnny Appleseed 685.

School was dismissed at noon today to permit teachers to straighten out the records and to give students in junior and senior high schools a chance to make adjustments in the schedules if necessary.

New students in the buildings were having the usual trouble locating various rooms while teachers were busy making the usual records for the pupils.

H. D. Bishop, assistant principal at Senior high, said that the enrollment was lower this year, but he was unable to estimate how much.

The decrease in the number of pupils at Senior high, Bishop said, was probably due to the fact that many boys are in the armed forces and many other pupils are out working this year.

GRIN BROADLY

Italian-Americans Happy at News of Surrender.

NEW YORK — (INS) — Broad grins spread across the faces of 1,200,000 Italo-Americans in New York today as they learned the news of Italy's surrender.

From the corner grocer to learned judges of Italian descent, they greeted the "good news" with jubilation, and plunged immediately into plans for celebration. Dominick Simone, president of the Italian-American Grocers association, expressed the sentiments of thousands when he exclaimed:

"The people of Italy have been starving long enough. We are all happy now for the people of Italy."

STEALS CLOCK, GETS TIME

These Yanks Paid Price of Allied Victory

This picture is not pretty, but it tells the story behind today's unconditional surrender of Italy. These are American paratroopers who were cut down by Axis gunfire in Sicily during the invasion of the Mediterranean island that led directly to Italy's fall. They paid the supreme price of victory. The photo is by the U. S. army signal corps and is from the war department's files.

A Wartime Necessity

IN WARTIME more than any other period, the duty of a newspaper is to keep the people informed.

Wartime makes that a complicated task, however. Newsprint—the paper on which your newspaper is printed—has been rationed and stricter rationing is coming because the supply is dwindling.

Newspapers have taken various steps to meet this situation—but most of them have striven to continue to present the news.

In a city such as Mansfield, served by one paper, The News-Journal feels a deep responsibility. It must do its best to present the latest news. It wants to help promote the war effort. It wants to support war loan campaigns, and all other worthwhile activities.

But with the newsprint supply reduced and steadily shrinking, reductions in its use must be made.

Hence The News-Journal regretfully announces that after Saturday, Sept. 11, it is forced to discontinue publication of the Saturday tabloid comic supplement.

The News-Journal is confident that its readers will understand the necessity for this move.

Planners of Italy's Downfall Together as They Hear News

WASHINGTON — President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Winston Churchill, partners in the planning of Anglo-American military strategy, received today the news they had been expecting and waiting for—the news that the Axis had been split asunder with the capitulation of Italian armed forces.

The news, tersely flashed to the world from Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower's North African headquarters, represented the culmination of brilliant military operations conceived, in consultation with their staffs, by Mr. Roosevelt and Churchill in conferences begun here in December, 1941, and climaxed so far as the Mediterranean theater was concerned in the historic meeting at Casablanca early this year.

That Italian unconditional surrender was imminent was surmised here because of Churchill's prolonged stay in this country after conclusion of the Quebec conferences last month.

It appeared probable that the president and the prime minister had laid down the general terms of Italian capitulation—terms consonant with the "unconditional surrender" formula announced at Casablanca—but had left Gen. Eisenhower with a relatively free hand to deal with Italian offers.

At the war department the news, packed with portents as the most tremendous single break in the Axis war front to date, was received with official silence for the time being.

Military observers, however, were quick to recognize the

DIES IN ACTION

Holmes County Soldier Killed, Parents Are Informed.

The names of two more Richland county area soldiers were added today to World war II casualty lists.

Pvt. Rollin Hamsher, 21, son of Mr. and Mrs. Melvin Hamsher, Walnut creek, became the first war casualty in Holmes county. A telegram from the war department said he had been killed in action in Sicily.

Surviving besides the parents are his widow, Edith, and a brother, Richard.

Pvt. Hamsher was inducted Dec. 4, 1942, and received his basic training at Camp Wheeler, Ga. He had been overseas several months.

Another reported "missing in action" in the middle east war theater is Staff Sgt. Wilbur M. Zeger, son of Mrs. Nellie Zeger, Mt. Gilead R. D. 2.

PUT RECREATION LEVY ON BALLOT

Councilmen Vote Unanimously To Place Issue Before City Voters In November.

The way had been opened today to place a proposed two-tenths mill recreation levy on the November ballot for Mansfield voters.

Acting at the request of the City Recreation board, city council last night unanimously approved the levy plan and authorized the council clerk to certify the resolution to the county board of elections with the request that the levy proposal be placed on the ballot.

Members of the recreation board have emphasized that the levy will help the city solve its juvenile delinquency problem by providing funds for playgrounds and healthful entertainment for boys and girls.

It was estimated the levy will provide $12,200 a year for the next five years if voters approve it in November. The city has been forced to curtail its youth recreation program since a similar proposed levy was defeated in 1939.

Floyd Dent, chairman of the recreation board, said voters will be informed well in advance of election how the levy money will be spent to bring about better living conditions for the city's youth.

MEETING WITH STALIN NEAR, LONDON HINTS

Belief Bolstered By Parley There of High Officials of Three Powers.

(By Associated Press)

LONDON—The first actual Anglo-Soviet American meeting since a tri-partite parley was proposed at the recent Quebec conference took place here today when Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden had luncheon with Ivan Maisky, Soviet vice-commissar of foreign affairs, and U. S. Ambassador John G. Winant.

The luncheon came on the heels of President Roosevelt's announcement that prospects for a Roosevelt - Churchill - Stalin meeting were brighter.

The fact that the wives of the three diplomats were present at today's luncheon was interpreted here as meaning the spadework for the conference had been completed in the friendliest atmosphere.

Maisky, Eden and Winant had been meeting heretofore in pairs without all three being together at one time.

It already was known here, however, that Maisky had agreed to a tri-power meeting on the foreign minister level as a prelude to a possible meeting on the prime minister level.

It had also been agreed that out of the original tripartite parley there should grow some form of commission which could sit as a more or less permanent body and facilitate decisions needing quick action.

Hitler Reorganizes Industry To Meet War Devastation.

LONDON — (U.P.) — The Berlin radio reported today that Adolf Hitler had instituted a sweeping re-organization of German industry, setting up two reichministers as co-directors and virtual dictators of the nation's economic life.

In an apparent effort to pump new life into his bomb-shattered war industry, Hitler put Albert Speer, minister for armaments and munitions, in charge of the entire Reich production, and Dr. Walther Funk, minister for economic affairs, at the head of the general Nazi economic policy.

Hitler's decree was dated Sept. 2, but was announced only today by the Berlin radio.

Gen. Eisenhower Reveals Capitulation As Germans Say U. S. Troops on Move to New Goals; Axis Split Comes 5 Days After Invasion.

(By Associated Press)

Allied headquarters announced today that Italy had surrendered unconditionally, five days after the British Eighth army stormed across the Messina strait from Sicily, even as Axis broadcasts asserted that American seaborne forces were moving toward new goals.

Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower announced the surrender.

A military armistice was granted to Italy.

The capitulation came from the government of Marshal Pietro Badoglio, who succeeded Benito Mussolini when the junior partner of Adolf Hitler was ousted July 25.

Thus the minor member of the Berlin-Tokyo-Rome Axis met the stipulation that has been insisted upon by President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill—unconditional surrender and nothing less.

The announcement came as dispirited Italian troops by the hundreds surrendered to British and Canadian troops advancing up the Calabrian peninsula, where the Allies landed last Friday on the heels of a 38-day Sicilian victory which sent the Germans fleeing to the mainland.

American armies which took part in the Tunisian and Sicilian victories have not participated in the Calabrian invasion, and the Italian surrender leaves them free to strike elsewhere in Europe.

(Axis radio stations broadcast nothing immediately on the capitulation. About an hour earlier the German radio told of fresh British troop landings near Pizzo, about 30 miles north of the place where British and Canadian troops had been last reported fighting.)

Today's communique said the terms of the armistice had been approved by the governments of Great Britain, the United States and Russia, and "both parties have bound themselves" to abide by the terms of the agreement.

Eisenhower said the agreement was signed by his representatives and those of Marshal Badoglio.

All hostilities will terminate at once, Eisenhower added.

The commander in chief promised "all Italians who assist in the fight against the Germans will have the support of the United Nations."

Eisenhower's text:

"This is General Dwight D. Eisenhower, commander in chief of the Allied force. The Italian government has surrendered its armed forces unconditionally. As Allied commander in chief, I have granted a military armistice the terms of which have been approved by the governments of the United Kingdom, the United States, and the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics. Thus, I am acting in the interests of the United Nations.

"The Italian government has bound itself to abide by these terms without reservation. The armistice was signed by my representative and the representative of Marshal Badoglio, and it becomes effective this instant.

"Hostilities between the armed forces of the United Nations and those of Italy terminate at once. All Italians who now act to help eject the German aggressors from Italian soil will have the assistance and support of the United Nations."

Allied headquarters said the capitulation terms were signed last Friday—the day that British and Canadian troops moved onto the Italian mainland.

The headquarters announcement:

"Some weeks ago the Italian government made an approach to the British and American governments with a view to concluding an armistice. A meeting was arranged and took place in neutral territory. It was at once explained to the representatives of the Italian government that they must surrender unconditionally.

"On this understanding representatives of the Allied commander in chief were empowered to communicate to them the military conditions which they would have to fulfill.

"One clause in these military terms binds the Italian government to comply with the political, economic and financial conditions of the Allies which will be imposed later.

"Further meetings were arranged and took place in Sicily.

"The armistice was signed at Allied advance headquarters there on Sept. 3, but it was agreed with the representatives of the Italian government that the armistice should come into force at a moment most favorable for the Allies, and be simultaneously announced by both

'Back The Attack' - - - Buy War Bonds Now!

Editorial

MEASURED in terms of lives and of suffering, dollars mean little, and if something could be said which would carry to the consciousness of every man and woman in Mansfield a realization that money invested in War Bonds would actually save lives of American boys, reduce the number of wounded, and hasten the release of those held as prisoners of war in Germany, Italy and Japan, the task of meeting city and county quotas in War Bond sales would be an easy one.

It is not possible, however, to forecast casualty figures, or to know which boys are destined to return safely and which must give their lives, or suffer through future years as a result of participation in the present war.

But it can be said, with assurance, that every day, hour and minute that the war is needlessy prolonged will bring death, suffering and hardship to some of the nation's finest young men who are now on battle fronts or who will be there before the conflict ends.

Tomorrow is the day proclaimed by President Roosevelt for opening the Third War Loan campaign, intended to add $15,000,000,000 to the funds needed to carry the war to victory. Mansfield's share in this total is $4,600,000 and Richland county's goal, $6,060,000.

This means, in effect, that many persons will find it necessary to abandon customary spending and saving habits in order to make a larger investment in War Bonds than had been previously planned—but a stage has been reached in the war at which the mounting costs of attack make huge expenditures necessary quickly.

Farthest from the thought of patriotic Americans should be an idea that they can "live better" as a result of greater earnings in wartime, or that anyone can honestly escape sharing in the responsibility of winning the war, either by active participation in some branch of the service or by working, earning and investing every dollar possible in War Bonds.

Remember also, that purchase of War Bonds will do three vital things: It will help win the war more quickly, and thus save lives; it will protect your own future as a safe investment, and it will protect the nation against inflation, during and after the war.

Several thousand Mansfield and Richland county men and women will start tomorrow as active canvassers in the sale of War Bonds in this community. Their responsibility is no greater than that of every other resident of this community, yet they are volunteering their time and effort to carry through work that must be done.

Try to visualize your dollars as being directly effective in saving the life, or contributing to the safe return, of some Mansfield or Richland county service man now in one of the battle areas—and buy bonds accordingly!

HULL SLAPS ARGENTINA FOR REQUEST

Turns Down Lend-Lease Plea With Charge Nation Still Trades With Axis.

(By Associated Press)

WASHINGTON — Possibly apprehensive over Brazil's growing power, Argentina has asked for—and been refused—American lease-lend materials, including implements of war.

The request came from the Argentine foreign minister, Vice Admiral Segundo Storni on Aug. 5 and the flat turndown was released by Secretary of State Hull last night. The exchanges, in which Hull pulled no punches, were made public here and in Buenos Aires.

The Argentine cabinet distributed the messages without comment.

Storni contended Argentina was pro-ally, though it is the only neutral in the hemisphere. All others have broken relations with the Axis. He intimated also that his country could be accused of stab-in-the-back tactics if the situation were changed now, likening it to Italy's reversal of form from neutrality to open warfare against France in 1940.

Hull shot back that Argentina still is doing business with the Axis, and harbors enemy agents and espionage.

As long as Argentina stays out of the inter-American hemispheric defense setup, it would be folly for the U. S. to allow this country to have American-produced instruments of war, Hull intimated.

Storni, in his letter, recalled the military coup which placed General Pedro Ramirez' government in power and he said the present administration was not Fascist nor event sympathetic with the Axis.

The Argentine's principal competitor in South America—Brazil—was praised only today by U. S. army Chief of Staff George C. Marshall for its early plunge into the war on the Allied side and for its work in protecting that theater.

Storni contended Argentina couldn't take such an abrupt step.

City Workers Told Council To Give Them Pay Increase.

City employes had won another round today in their fight for pay increases, council agreeing to give the workers' request consideration at a caucus session within the next few days.

C. N. Shultz, chairman of the special council committee named to study the request for raises, said he would call the members together to decide how much workers' salaries can be raised and to prepare legislation setting up the raises if they are granted.

Meanwhile, council postponed action last night on a proposal to require appointive city employes to work three years to get two weeks vacation with pay. Employes with from one to three years service would get one week with pay. Shultz, sponsor of the bill, said it would be brought before council again this fall. The measure, as it stood, would have affected remaining vacations this summer and fall.

Amazing results in building STURDY BODIES!

1—Promote the flow of vital digestive juices in the stomach

2—Energize your body with RICH, RED BLOOD!

YOUNG people, especially those of grammar and high school age, are prone to be deficient in stomach digestive juices and red-blood.

A growing-person who is operating on a 65 to 70% healthy blood volume or a stomach digestive capacity of only 50 to 60% normal is severely handicapped.

In such cases Nature needs extra help. Organic troubles or focal infection, if they exist, must be corrected. Tissue foods must be digested and rich, red-blood must be present to build sturdy bodies.

SSS Tonic is especially designed to build-up BLOOD STRENGTH when deficient . . . and to promote those STOMACH JUICES which digest the food so the body can make proper use of it in tissue building and repair.

These two important results enable the body to make use of the food as Nature intended. Thus you may gain a keen appetite . . . firm flesh . . . body energy . . . mental alertness!

Build Sturdy Health and Help America Win

Thousands and thousands of users have testified to the benefits SSS Tonic has brought to them and scientific research shows that it gets results—that's why so many say "SSS Tonic builds sturdy health—makes you feel like yourself again." At drug stores in 10 and 20 oz. sizes. (T.S.S.S.Co men, adding that last night's council appropriation was sufficient to do the job. He said only a few dollars has been spent from the previous $500 appropriation.

Councilman George C. Kyle frequently at odds with the mayor, last night urged council to set up the $1,000 Mayor Locke requested for the appraisal work. Russell Porch, First ward councilman, quickly pointed out, however, that the $500 appropriation had already been made and $800 more should be sufficient to get the job done.

It's Mayor Locke's idea to use the appraisal figures submitted to the city by the three real estate men in negotiating for the land needed for the airport expansion.

BOARD IGNORES TWO ON POLICE RADIO PURCHASE

Locke, Wolff Make Award as Solicitor and Police Chief Oppose Action.

Against the advice of City Solicitor Leslie K. Wagner and Police Chief Meade K. Bates, the city board of control (Mayor W. J. Locke and Service-Safety Director Fred B. Wolff) today said a contract for new police radio equipment would be let to the Galvin Manufacturing company of Chicago, maker of Motorola radios.

The mayor held out for the Chicago firm, lower of two bidders, asserting today that "there hasn't been any reason for argument about who should get the contract."

Asked for an opinion on the legality of the bids, Wagner recommended rejecting both of them and re-advertising for offers. He said it's customary to award contracts within 30 days after the bids are opened, and the month elapsed yesterday.

Wagner said he would approve "as a formality" the bond furnished by the Chicago firm to protect the city against possible court action involving patent infringement.

Bates favored the other bidder, the Fred M. Link company of New York, on that basis, arguing that it would be better to pay $253 more for equipment that was licensed under the Armstrong patent on frequency modulation transmitters.

The Chicago firm asked $4.237 for the police radio equipment and the Link company quoted the cost at $4,590.

Another city contract was to be awarded today, two months after the bids were opened, this one going to Frank Beymer, Mansfield contractor, for remodeling the North Main street pumping station. Beymer was the low bidder, but his bid was $1,000 higher than the city's estimate of the probable cost of the work, which accounted for the delay in making the award.

City council last night appropriated $1,335 more for the pumping station project so the contract could be let. Beymer will do the work for $6,700. Other bidders were Friebel and Hortman, Shelby, $7,233, and the Simon Small and Sons company, Mansfield, $7,210.

POOL OF CITY FIRE APPARATUS BEING STUDIED

Council Hears OCD Request To Use Equipment In Other Cities If Needed.

A request from state civilian defense officials for use of Mansfield's firemen and fire equipment in other cities in a seven-county area in northcentral Ohio in the event of a war emergency was under study today by city council.

In submitting the request to council, Mayor W. J. Locke, chairman of the Mansfield civilian defense council, suggested that council consider the condition and adequacy of the city's fire department before acting on the request.

Under the plan, men and equipment would be used on an exchange basis, with cities helping each other in the event of an enemy air attack or a disastrous fire resulting from sabotage. In the area with Mansfield and Richland county are Ashland, Crawford, Huron, Seneca, Erie and Sandusky counties.

Miscellaneous business transacted last night by council included:

Selection of Roy W. Vaughn, member at large, to represent council 'at a meeting with Mayor W. J. Locke, Ed Wyllie of the city parks board, and representatives of the city's colored population on a plan to provide recreational facilities for the colored residents of Mansfield.

Authorized City Engineer W. C. Statler to prepare plans and estimate the cost of construction of a wooden footbridge over the Rocky Fork from the end of First avenue to East Fifth street for the convenience of industrial workers in that section of the city.

Referred to the city solicitor for a legal opinion a request from County Engineer H. C. Sword that the city share with Madison township the cost of repairing a bridge on Longview avenue near the Barnes Manufacturing company plant.

Re-elected Roy W. Vaughn and George C. Kyle to membership on the city firemen's pension board.

Voted to reduce the street improvement assessment against Lila B. Schraedly, Arlington avenue property owner, from $228 to $114.

Approved payment of a 1938 bill for $155.23 submitted by Kallmerten and Baer for materials purchased by the city. The claimant admitted error in failing to submit the claim earlier.

Approved payment of claims of $80 each to Frank Apple and Philo Pifer for extra work in the city garbage department in August.

Referred to committees petitions for construction of sanitary sewers and water mains on Oakenwaldt avenue between Grace and Vine streets and to vacate a section of Hemlock avenue at the east end of Ohio street.

Referred to the claims committee a request from James W. Seaton, former operator of the Arrow Cab company, for refund of a part of his taxi license because of his enlistment in the navy and sale of his property.

Planners of Italy's Downfall Together as They Hear News

thus-far unparalleled opportunities now opened up for the Allied forces under Eisenhower.

It appeared likely that Italian capitulation had long been known to be inevitable and that the British Eighth army's assault upon the toe of Italy was designed to spur Italian leaders to "surrender with honor." It had been pointed out that the Italians could hardly be expected to give up until the homeland had been invaded.

War department observers believed that the Italian surrender will lead to rapid occupation of at least a substantial portion of the Italian peninsula.

The Germans, however, may be expected to oppose complete Anglo-American domination of Italy. There have been indications that they will undertake to hold a line somewhere in northern Italy, despite the collapse of their erstwhile Allies.

The Germans may try to hold the Po river valley and may attempt to establish a line in the Appenine mountains across Italy in the region of Florence. European sources recently have reported the withdrawal of German forces into northern Italy.

In addition to giving the Allies a tremendous advantage in land and air fighting, the Italian surrender will remove the last potential—inherent in continued existence of the Italian fleet as a fighting force—to Allied domination of the Mediterranean. The fleet comprises about 190 vessels, of which, however, by no means all are fit for sea duty.

The surrender also appeared to advance the day of all-out continental operations against Germany itself. Gen. George C. Marshall, U. S. army chief of staff, and Admiral Ernest J. King, chief of naval operations, were in the White House when the news from North Africa arrived.

LUMBERMENS ASSETS INCREASE TO $3,971,688, BOARD INFORMED

In his report to the board of directors of Lumbermens Mutual Insurance compauy meeting here today, President Charles H. Keating stated that as a result of operations for the first six months of 1943, assets of the company reach a new high figure of $3,971,688, an increase of $84,038.

During the same period, the policyholders' surplus and voluntary reserve reached $1,220,084, an increase of $40,486.

President Keating reported to the board that since the organization of the company in 1895, it has received in premiums from policyholders $54,-803,161, that it has paid to its policy holders to cover losses $20,256,846 and has returned to the policyholders in the form of dividends $14,463,153.

He said that there is a marked upward trend in fire losses not only noticed by Lumbermens company but other companies covering the nation as a whole.

The increase in fire losses is due in part to the greatly accelerated rate of manufacturing, the employment of inexperienced help and the lack of adequate fire-fighting equipment and personnel, Keating stated.

A luncheon at the Mansfield-Leland hotel followed the morning business meeting.

Directors and out-of-town visitors attending the meeting included: R. H. Campbell, Toledo; C. A. Hubbard, Martinsville, Ind.; H. E. Stone, Boston, Mass.; Vernon Stouffer, Cleveland; George M. Gray, Coshocton; F. B. Fowler, Indianapolis; Findley M. Torrence, Xenia; I. G. Saltmarsh, Indianapolis; Mark Kemper, Chicago; H. L. Kennicott, Chicago; R. F. McCrea, Pittsburgh; N. B. Council Studies OPA Request For 'Black Market Ordinance'

The Office of Price Administration last night asked city council to help enforce price ceilings by authorizing the OPA to call on police to arrest violators and to use the municipal court for hearing the cases against them.

Arguing that "price support will win only with popular support from the local communities," A. R. Fiorette, chief district enforcement attorney for the OPA in Cleveland, took the request to council which today had his proposal under study.

Fiorette called for the passage of a "black market ordinance" to provide for fines up to $50 for violations of price ceilings of failure to take ration stamps for purchases. Fiorette said Cleveland and Youngstown have enacted the ordinances. Akron and Canton, however, refused to help OPA by throwing its courts open to it.

Fiorette told council last night that local cooperation would help to speed up enforcement of price ceilings and ration regulations since it often required months to get a case through the federal court.

He said the OPA investigators would obtain evidence against persons it wanted prosecuted and turn the material over to the city solicitor who would present the case in municipal court. The city's police might be called upon to arrest the alleged violator and bring him into court, Fiorette said. Violation of the OPA regulations would be regarded as a misdemeanor in the city court.

BOOMERANG OF WAR CRUSHED ITALY'S MORALE

Conquest That Started Safe and Easy Became Nightmare of Hunger, Desperation.

By ALTON BLAKESLEE

(AP Foreign Staff Writer)

A safe, easy war that boomeranged into frightful calamities gnawed like acid into Italian morale, finally toppling that nation as the first Axis victim of World War II.

Preceding it into inglorious collapse went Benito Mussolini, the prophet and artisan of modern-day Fascism who sought a 20th century Roman empire.

Italy fell after Allied armies battered in her front door of Sicily and put her cities including Rome under devastation from the air.

The Italian rallying cry changed to "peace!" from the drum-thumping days of "Nice, Corsica and Tunis" and proclamations of the Mediterranean as "mare nostrum"—"our sea."

It was a confident Mussolini who launched his "stab in the back" march on France on June 10, 1940—when France was collapsing, when Britain stood alone, when speedy and absolute victory seemed so close to the dictators' grasp. For Mussolini, conqueror of Ethiopia and Albania, it seemed almost like a bloodless coup.

It was a criminal miscalculation. In three years and several months the war has boomeranged to strip him of his African empire, to tear Sicily from Italy, to bring invaders to the mainland, to bottle up the Mediterranean, to bring the air siege to all Italians and drain the country of manpower and shatter much of her navy.

For Mussolini, leader of the Black Shirts and would-be imitator of the Roman conquerors, it was the last hand in the game of intrigue and power he started with his "march" on Rome in 1922 to become a dictator. Mussolini was ousted July 25, and his Fascist regime began to shred to ruins.

The first few months of war were benign and glorious for Italy. They brought a share in the spoils of beaten France, more of a "place in the sun."

In September, 1940, Italian legions were sent driving into Egypt, 300,000 strong, but they stopped after a 70-mile penetration. The British war office later disclosed that Mussolini was facing only a handful of imperial troops, that he had missed a golden chance to seize all of Egypt and Africa. So began the African campaign so ill-fated for Italy.

In October, 1940, after subjecting Albania, Mussolini lashed at Greece, with every expectation of a quick victory. But the astonishing Greeks threw him back nearly into the Adriatic sea, and inflicted enormous losses in men, arms, and prestige upon the modern-day Romans.

Mussolin was saved only by Hitler, whose formidable armored columns smashed the Greeks and their British Allies, to achieve victory in April, 1941. Since then thousands more of Italians have died in guerilla warfare waged by the undaunted Jugoslavs, Greeks and Albanians. The "conquest" brought little amelioration of difficult Italian food and supply problems at home.

With the Greek fiasco came the first repulse in Africa, with the Italians sent scampering 304 miles back to Bengasi early in 1941. Again Hitler came to Italian aid, and there were subsequent Italian-Axis triumphs in the see-saw battles of North Africa.

But when the disastrous retreat began at El Alamein last fall, the Italians were sacrificed over that sorrowful road as the rear guard troops to save the Germans, with scores of thousands of Italians killed, wounded, and captured. With the British eighth army's advance into Tripoli, the African empire that Mussolini had expanded and glorified was at last fallen. It was a grievous blow to the prestige of the dictator.

Allied armies over-ran Tunisia, then grouped for the assault into Sicily to take that bastian island in 38 days. Pantelleria and Lampedusa were seized before it to wipe out Italy's Mediterranean island except for Sardinia and Corsica taken from France.

At sea, the Italians fared nearly as badly, in steady attacks upon their sea power and in such disasters as the British torpedo attack upon Taranto and the battle of Matapan. After the first 26 months of war, by British estimate, Italy had lost half her naval power and two-thirds of her merchant fleet.

The final capitaulation came just five days after British and Canadian troops, operating under the American Mediterranean commander, Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, had landed on the Italian mainland at the toe.

At home, Italy fell gradually under the stern control of the Nazis, with an estimated 200,000 Germans virtually occupying the country, dominating it industrially, politically and militarily. The Italian people chafed under the Nazi yoke, and arrests for resistance to the Germans were numerous.

Food shortages had become acute by the spring of 1942, and Italians objected when food was exported to Germany. Later the Germans promised food to hungry Italians as a step to fortify their resistance. The peril of inflation increased, and the Fascist party had to purge its ranks of members accused of cheating and of black market operations. The cabinet was shaken up last spring to bolster morale.

The drain on manpower was severe, with the Nazis demanding soldiers for the Russian front, with heavy losses in Africa and in the Balkans. In the early spring of 1943, Mussolini recalled 10 divisions from Russia to strengthen his defenses.

This recall extended to the Balkans and Greece as Sicily toppled.

Through the whole gloomy story Italian morale worsened, and the fierce Allied air raids that struck Rome and laid waste Italy's northern cities in particular to carry out the Churchill promise late in 1942 of "prolonged, scientific and shattering air attack" hastened Italy's end in the war with every block-buster bomb.

FDR Says Lend-Lease Not 'Pure Gifts'

WASHINGTON —(AP)— President Roosevelt says it is not America's intention to write off as pure gifts the materials which are going to our allies under lend-lease arrangements.

The chief executive took occasion at his press-radio conference yesterday to correct any such implication when he said that two sentences included in the latest lend-lease report, which bore his name, had not actually been approved by him.

The sentences, appearing in a foreword to the report issued while the president was in Quebec last month, read:

"The congress in passing and extending the lend-lease act made it plain that the United States wants no new war debts to jeopardize the coming peace. Victory and a secure peace are the only coin in which we can be repaid."

Mr. Roosevelt told the reporters these statements had an element of truth but yet were not entirely accurate, adding that in a narrow, technical sense, we do not want new war debts. But the nations benefiting from lend-lease are expected to pay us, as much as may be possible, though not necessarily in dollars.

The president commented he did not like the use of the word coin in the second sentence, because people think of coins as something that can be jingled in their pockets, although coin could mean other things.

Trial Opens In Case of Sale of Beer to Minors

Jack Theohor, charged with selling beer to minors, went on trial today in juvenile court with Judge Stuart H. Cramer presiding.

After two hours of selection and discarding jurors and exhausting the panel drawn from the trial, a jury was chosen and opening arguments were presented by acting Prosecutor John C. O'Donnell and James V. Will defense attorney.

Theohor was arrested July 14 on a charge of selling beer to five boys between the ages of 14 and 17 who were picked up by city police July 9 for drunken and disorderly conduct. The boys told juvenile court officials they had obtained the beer at Jack's place of which Theohor is the alleged proprietor.

Hearing on the case was originally set for Aug. 11 and when his attorney was unable to represent him at that time it was continued to Aug. 18. It was again continued until August 31 when Will entered a request for jury trial. Further delay set the date at Sept. 8.

This is the Massillon system:

Completely togged out in football uniforms, 140 boys are going through their daily gridiron practice chores in the nation's high school football capital, all under supervision of competent coaches.

Not all of the boys are at Massillon Washington high school. In fact the majority are at the three junior high schools.

The town eats, breathes and lives football 12 months in the year, is in the midst of its autumn hysteria. That beating by Canton McKinley last fall didn't change things.

While some high schools over the state have quit football because they couldn't find coaches, and others are going ahead with makeshift arrangements, including volunteer coaching help by men not connected with the schools, Massillon goes ahead with a full coaching staff.

Johnny Burnison, former Galion coach, has been moved up from Edmund A. Jones junior high to the high school staff, and his place at Jones has been taken by Lauri Wartiainen, assistant coach at Mt. Vernon last year.

Mansfield has sometimes been accused of using the Massillon system. Let's just forget the accusation until the systems are comparable.

The Massillon Independent says:

Fooball in the junior high schools is an important and integral part of the Massillon football picture. It is at the junior highs that the boys who later become the wearers of the orange and black at Washington high school get their first taste of the autumnal sport and acquire the fundamentals so necessary for a football player of ability.

For many years now the importance of proper training of boys in the junior highs has been stressed and it has paid off big dividends as year after year Washington high school has maintained its prestige as one of the leading developers of scholastic football teams in the country.

Paul Brown, now coach at Ohio State university, inaugurated the junior high system and made it pay big dividends. His successor, W. G. (Bud) Houghton, now a lieutenant in the United States Navy, did likewise during his one year at the helm of the Tigers.

And Elwood Kammer, now boss of the Tigers, is doing the same thing. Kammer and Lieut. Houghton came to their positions as head coach of the Tigers from junior high school berths.

Practically all the boys on this year's Tigers roster learned their first football in one of the city's three junior highs. Several promising candidates on the squad for the first time this year gained their experience in the junior highs and the future quality of Washington high grid performers will be based largely on the experience they have acquired in the junior highs.

So this year the junior high coaches, working in unison with the Washington high staff are putting their charges through daily drills and their training programs are just as strenuous as those set up for the Tigers.

And the boys in the junior highs like it as well as the lads at Washington high. A visit to the practice fields will convince one of that. There are quite a few well developed lads on the junior high squads but for the most part they are little youngsters.

Many of them wouldn't tip the scales at 100 pounds, soaking wet but they are in there battling for positions as hard as if they weighed 150. These boys, with a year or two still ahead of them in junior high are going to do a lot of growing between now and the time they enter the senior high school and if they are taught the proper fundamentals of football and are well conditioned they will be ready to take their place in a Tiger lineup in a couple of years.

20-Game Winners Scarcer

Few Big League Hurlers Have Chance For Mark.

By JUDSON BAILEY
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

With the closing of the major league campaign less than four weeks away, the field of potential 20-game winners among the pitchers has narrowed to half a dozen men, two in the American league and four in the National.

This is a shrinkage from the score or more who were in the running a month ago, but it indicates what a difficult goal 20 victories is for even good pitchers with good clubs. If all six of this year's candidates make the grade it will be two more than last year.

In 1942 the two St. Louis stars, Morton Cooper and Rookie Johnny Beazley, won 22 and 21, respectively, in the National league while Cecil (Tex) Hughson of Boston and Ernie Bonham of the New York Yankees won 22 and 21 in the American league.

Of this group only Cooper will be a repeated this year. He has won 19 and lost eight in the Cardinals' sweep toward another pennant. Bealey has entered the army and Bonham and Hughson have each won 12 games to date.

Truett (Rip) Sewell of the Pittsburgh Pirates, proponent of the famed parachute pitch sometimes called the eephus (nothing) ball, already has won 20 games and lost seven.

Elmer Riddle of the Cincinnati Reds has won 18 and lost nine and Hiram Bithorn, the Puerto Rican righthander of the Chicago Cubs, has won 17 and lost 10. Both have good prospects of hitting 20 before the season ends.

In the American league Spurgeon (Spud) Chandler of the Yankees is the nearest thing to a sure shot for 20 with a present record of 18 and three and Paul (Dizzy) Trout of the Detroit Tigers has won 17 and lost 10.

Trout attained his 17th triumph and fifth shoutout yesterday as the Tigers took a doubleheader from the Chicago White Sox 5-0 and 6-5. These games, the only major league action of the day, were postponed from Labor Day and drew a sparse turnout of 5,962 fans.

Another light schedule was on tap today, three games in the National and none in the American.

Armstrong Bout's Off

Henry Denies He'll Give Up Ring Because of Eyesight.

LOS ANGELES —(INS)— Henry Armstrong, former triple title boxing champion, can still fight in California but his scheduled Sept. 18 bout with Luther (Slugger) White is off, the California state athletic commission ruled today.

The commission made its decision after the veteran Negro fighter testified yesterday that he was "tired of fighting" but denied it was eye trouble that had discouraged him.

The members, apparently unconvinced about Armstrong's eyes, called off the White bout but they declined to rule on his future efforts.

"We don't feel the commission should retire Armstrong," Jules Covey, chariman, said. "That is something he should do himself."

Armstrong, asserting he is in better condition than at any time since his comeback, denied making statements attributed to him after he lost to Ray Robinson at New York two weeks ago.

"I told reporters before the fight I was quitting, but I never said I was retiring on account of my eyesight," he said. "And I had forgotten about my contract with White."

NAVY 'WORLD SERIES' TO BEGIN ON SUNDAY

NORFOLK, Va.—(AP)—Don't be asking a sailor around this naval base whether he thinks the St. Louis Cardinals or the New York Yankees will win the world series.

These sailors are much more concerned about the navy's 'world series' which opens Sunday between the rival Norfolk naval training station and the Norfolk naval air station.

The two rivals of the navy will play a seven-game series and both clubs say it won't last beyond four contests.

THE CLUBHOUSE

By HAROLD .. RATLIFF

DALLAS—(AP)—The navy has issued orders that it's V-12 trainees going out for college football are not to be referred to in sports stories as navy men and that the percentage of such men on the squad should not be mentioned.

No, this isn't with any idea that the information could give comfort to the enemy. The fact that 24 V-12ers at the University of Texas are going to play football wouldn't reveal any damaging news or help Nazi morale. In fact, it probably would depress A. Hitler to think Americans not only have time to give him a good licking on the battlefronts but also time to do a little playing on the side.

The reason for the navy's order is that it's out to win battles and not conference championships. However, it does feel that participation in football will be of physical and social benefit to its trainees, because it will bring fellowship and understanding between its men and the collegians. But each trainee is taking part in football on his own time, meanwhile meeting all requirements of the navy program. In other words, he's doing just what the collegian is doing—participating in athletics on his own volition and passing the required courses in order to be eligible. Therefore, the V-12 man is really just one of the boys, so why shouldn't he be referred to as a college football player rather than a navy player?

But, while the navy's attitude is quite understandable in wanting to win sea battles above football championships and bowl bids, it's going to be a trifle confusing this fall when the college teams hook up.

For instance, here's how a running account of one of those gripping struggles might appear:

"Dewberry State took the kickoff and marched to two quick first downs with Bill Smith of Notre Dame rapping tackle for nine yards and Ed Green of Southern California bouncing through center for 12. But here the Clearwater Aggies held, with Smith being smothered in another try at tackle and Green being thrown for a nine-yard loss when he attempted a pass. Two men from Oklahoma university—Jay Turner and Sam Jackson—next smeared Frank Jones of Oregon when he tried to circle left end, hitting him so hard he fumbled and Jack James of Vanderbilt recovered for the Aggies on the State 22-yard line."

Or suppose Ed Grabowski of Fordham kicked a field goal from the 18-yard line with only five seconds to play, thereby winning the game. This is how the writer might have to handle it:

"Ed Grabowski, a brawny boy from the Bronx, kicked Dewberry State into the Northeast-Central Conference football championship today with a field goal that floated through the uprights just before the gun, bringing a 10-7 victory that plunged the Clearwater Aggies from the nation's undefeated ranks and knocked them out of a Strawberry Bowl bid.

Grabowski, who was just a substitute at Fordham last year, was the whole show today and his play brought a thunderous roar from the blue-clad delegation occupying the stands for service men.

"Commander Frederick J. Matthews, a naval officer stationed in this area, jumped up and down on the sidelines yelling. 'I knew my boys would come through. I'm giving all of them Monday off.'"

But if you think the sports writers will have trouble think of the radio announcer:

"The Dewberry State right tackle made the terrific play," he yells. "He's Dan Tubbs of Ohio State—the same Dan Tubbs who set the Big Ten afire two years ago. Now they're back in the huddle; they snap into that puzzling shift. Steve Soliers, who was all-conference at Duke last fall, is back. He's taking the ball around left end but Paul Strong of Texas stopped him in his tracks. And now State is going to pass—and it's Willie Franks of—er—oh yes, Willie Franks, who is from Dewberry State. Yes, he's Dewberry State's very own . . . To the man who sent the telegram: I can't say why an Ohio State player is in the state line-up. He's eligible all right. Just one of those things. Just one of those things you'll find in wartime—"

Tulsa Finds No Bowl Cheer

Youngsters and 4F's Fail To Make Coach Smile.

TULSA, Okla. — (AP) — Bowl-minded Tulsa will be happy this year if it gets through the football season without being bowled over too often.

Coach Henry Frnka, a confirmed pessimist, looked over his comparatively small squad of 35 beardless youths and veteran 4-F's, and opined:

"We're asking a lot, physically and mentally, of this strange assortment of football players."

The Golden Hurricane, which went to the Sugar Bowl last New Year day, and to the Sun Bowl the year before, feels the lack of such backfield stars as All-America Glen Dobbs, great passer and kicker, and the scatrunner, N. A. Keithley.

Three of last year's linemen are back — Ellis Jones, one-armed blocking guard; Glenn Burgess, who is being shifted from guard to tackle and Clyde (Nip) Goodnight, an end. C. B. Stanley, a letter man of three years ago, has returned to school and is out for tackle.

Tulsa opens its season against Southern Methodist university at Dallas, Sept. 25, and plays Oklahoma at Oklahoma City, Oct. 16. Home games are Texas Tech, Oct. 9, Southwestern (Navy) of Georgetown, Tex., Oct. 30; Oklahoma A. & M., Nov. 6, and Arkansas, Nov. 25.

Poland's wife, Virginia, will meet Mrs. Wade Bricker in the finals of the women's championship golf tournament at the Shelby Country club later in the month.

Illinois Rookies Face Vets

Greenest Team In History Opens Season Saturday.

(By Associated Press)

CHICAGO—Illinois, the first Big Ten school to open the 1943 football season, probably will send the youngest and most inexperienced team in its history against the Camp Grant soldiers Saturday.

Even the one veteran the Illini have back from the 1942 squad may not be available for Saturday's opener. Buck Correll, a halfback, left for a conference with his draft board and yesterday still was at his Lincoln, Ill., home.

Among other Big Ten football practices yesterday, Wisconsin stressed smoother handling of assignments; offense was emphasized at Ohio State, passing at Indiana and pass defense at Iowa.

Purdue, resting from a succession of scrimmages, listened to Cecil Isbell, former boilermaker and later professional star, lecture on aerial strategy. At Michigan, fullback Bob Wiese was shifted to quarterback to fill in for the injured Jack Wink, a marine transfer from Wisconsin. In the backfield with Wiese were Bill Daley, Paul White and Elroy Hirsch.

At Minnesota, Don Bunge took over the tackle post, Vill Aldworth was expected to handle again this year until he failed to report. However, Bunge should make a good stand-in for the giant Aldworth. Bunge is six feet, seven inches tall and weighs 243 pounds.

Wood-Nelson Match Booked

Duration Open Champ To Face Pros' Choice.

CHICAGO —(U.P.)— Craig Wood, duration open golf champion, and Bryon Nelson, players' choice as the nation's top professional, will play a 72-hole challenge match this month, probably at Nelson's home course at Toledo, O.

Wood, Nelson and Fred Corcoran, P. G. A. tournament manager, revealed plans for the special match as they stopped here en route from the Golden Valley Invitational tournament at Minneapolis.

They said the match was the result of a challenge issued by Wood after the 16 professionals competing at Minneapolis voted Nelson the No. 1 golfer in the nation.

The last Wood-Nelson clash was in 1939 national open at Philadelphia when Nelson defeated Wood in a playoff for the title.

Wood paired with Jimmy Demaret to win the Golden Valley event. Nelson and Harold (Jug) McSpaden were second.

SINKWICH PONDERS PRO GRID CAREER

DETROIT —(AP)— Whether Frank Sinkwich, Georgia All-American halfback from Youngstown, will play professional football this year with the Detroit Lions may be decided at Akron, O., Sunday, Lions owner Fred L. Mandell, jr., reported.

He said Sinkwich had asked for a conference when the Lions meet the New York Giants in an exhibition game at Akron. Sinkwich will receive a medical discharge from the marine corps at Parris Island, S. C., Saturday.

NEW YORK—(AP)—Luis Suarez, Mexican sports writer who came to Forest Hills for a few days at the National Tennis championships, is trying to persuade some of the girls players to spend a few months in Mexico this winter studying and playing tennis . . . When the guy in the slot tossed him Arthur Sampson's story about the Yale quarterbacks barking signals in the good old way, a Boston headliner scribbled: "Yale, like Cornell, yells like-er-Odell."

The next time Ace Adams goes to the mound, which may be today, he'll break his relief pitching record of 61 appearances . . . And Paul Derringer needs only two more mound victories to make it 200 for his major league career. Then he'll probably be ready to join the only other 200-game winners in the league, Carl Hubbell and Freddie Fitzsimmons—on the bench. . . . Don't worry too much about those "outclassed" civilian footballers at Big Ten colloges. Minnesota has a 6-foot, 7-inch tackle named Don Bunge who is too big for the army and Ohio State's Ray Stackhouse, a mere 230-pound freshman, seems to have clinched a first-string tickle job.

Yankees And Cards Shut Door

They're Virtually In For Another World Series.

(By United Press)

NEW YORK — World series berths for the New York Yankees and the St. Louis Cardinals today became a virtual certainty when a quick tabulation determined that the Cards need only 10 and the Yanks 16 victories in their remaining games to clinch their respective pennants.

Although the second-place battle in both circuits was still going full blast, none of the contending clubs was conceded more than a mathematical possibility of upsetting the league leaders.

If the second place Cincinnati Reds were to win all the rest of their games, the Cards, with a 13½ game lead, need play only .435 ball to get home first in the National league. In the American loop, if the second place Cleveland Indians play 1.000 ball the rest of the season, the Yanks, with a .640 performance, would frustrate the Tribe's pennant ambitions. And each defeat the challenging clubs suffer will serve to make the leaders' tasks that much easier.

* * *

The only major league activity yesterday saw the Detroit Tigers take both ends of a doubleheader from the Chicago White Sox—a feat that made the American league race for second place tighter than a New Year's eve stag party. Only four percentage points separate the second, third and fourth place clubs, and fifth place Chicago can't be counte out of the runner-up spot yet. Here's the way the four clubs look on paper:

	W	L	Pct.	GB.
2. Cleveland	68	59	.535	11
3. Washington	71	62	.534	11
4. Detroit	68	60	.531	11½
5. Chicago	66	63	.512	14

All have approximately 30 games left to play and it's more than a possibility that the second and fifth place clubs could change places.

SIRENS, PLANES SIGNAL START OF BOND DRIVE

nance chairman, today appealed to Ohio residents to prepare to buy the "extra" bonds needed to help support American invasion, and necessary to put Ohio across the war loan goal.

"This will demand open-heart, open-purse response from millions of Ohioans," Moore said. "The Third War Loan Drive is called a 'people's loan.' Average persons with average pocketbooks must put it over."

President Roosevelt will open the $15,000,000,000 war loan drive tonight with a 10-minute radio address as part of an hour program beginning at 9 p. m.

The broadcast originates in Washington and Hollywood, and will include an all-star cast of motion picture and radio headliners. The president will speak at about 9:40 p. m.

Despite the handicap of a newsprint shortage and other wartime problems, the treasury's war finance division reported that "a barrage of front-page coverage, plus millions of lines of advertising is being laid down by the publishers and editors of the nation."

Meanwhile county plans were already well under way today after two township meetings last night. Jackson township residents met at the community house with Rollo Ulrich as chairman and Butler township residents met at the community house with Charles Stuart in charge.

Meetings will be held tonight at Jefferson township grange hall at 8:30 with A. T. Leedy, chairman; at Lucas school for Monroe township residents at 8.30 with Robert McFarland in charge; at Lexington school at 8:30 for Troy township residents with Ray Williams in charge.

BARS PUPILS

Board Says Tax-Free Residents Must Pay Tuition.

EUCLID — (U.P.) — The Euclid school board today barred 50 children from Lake Shore village federal housing project from attending Euclid school — unless they pay tuition—in continuation of its dispute with the federal public housing authority.

The board ordered that the parents of the children must pay tuition if the FPHA fails to accept county Auditor John A. Zangerle's valuation of the housing project.

The issue revolves around the valuation placed on the project, in lieu of taxes since the project is tax exempt. The board has rejected a payment of $8,100, based on the FPHA's valuation which was at variance with the county auditor's.

BOND $10,000 IN FRAUD CASE

Man Charged With Impersonating Officer To Face Grand Jury.

CANTON — (AP) — A federal grand jury at Cleveland will consider the case of Bernard F. Champagne, 37, who pleaded guilty to charges of fraud and impersonating a naval officer.

U. S. Commissioner Charles M. Ball set bond at $10,000 yesterday after Federal Bureau of Investigation agents arrested Champagne in nearby Dalton and charged him with representing himself to Mrs. Gladys Mohn, a Dalton widow, as a lieutenant commander in the U. S. navy, acting as a doctor and a surgeon.

Lee V. Boardman, agent in charge of the Cleveland FBI office, said Champagne persuaded Mrs. Mohn to give him $4,132 for investment in Florida real estate which the government was supposed to be considering for an airport.

They've Invented Throw-Away Diapers for Babies.

Designers of the three-cornered pants in 1943 style said the new diaper is made of soft absorbent paper which comes on a roll similar to paper toweling and presents no laundry or disposal problems.

HELL AND HIGH WATER

By William McLeod Raine

(Copyright, 1943)

CHAPTER XVI

As Bob had predicted to Broderick he was in the saddle within a week. The tan in his cheeks had washed out somewhat but was still weak. He favored his shoulder by picking mounts with an easy gait. At first he did light jobs close to the ranch house.

He saw little of Willie May. Of late she had been friendly, but he knew that would not last.

A good many rumors were in circulation as to the whereabouts of the Hickorys. They were reported in Texas and holed up in the Cherokee country but Bob was of opinion that they had separated. Probably some of them were no longer in the Indian Territory.

He had heard nothing from Cle Hightower and was uneasy about him. Very likely he was trying to find the Hickorys.

Broderick was finding difficulties in getting a pardon for the Indian. The Principal Chief conceded the bad reputation of Hightower's foes but would not act to save him without proper evidence.

Cal Judson was proving unexpectedly stubborn and Dkye Sims could not be found. Bob felt he should go and bring Todd back at once. J. A. had promised to find a place for him and his family on the ranch where they would be protected from the vengeance of the outlaws.

Bob borrowed sixty dollars from Broderick to pay for the trip. He traveled by train and stage. When he knocked on the door of the sod house the wrangler at Buffalo Skull corral was eating dinner. Mrs. Todd came to the door. At sight of Bob her sallow leathery face showed instant alarm.

"I reckon I'm a sure enough pain to you," he said laughing.

Reluctantly she invited him in.

The Todds had heard that the Hickorys were accused of the train robbery near Perry and were eager for news he could give them.

While eating he told the story of his adventures since seeing them last. Though he played down his own part, they realized that he was responsible for proving the Hickorys guilty of the hold-up.

When he had finished Mrs. Todd spoke: "You want Homer to go back with you to the Choctaw Nation. Looks like you could take 'No' for an answer and not come pesterin' us again."

"I've come to take you all back," he replied. "My boss owns the J A B outfit. It's a big spread, and he is a grand man. He has a job for Homer at the stables. There is a big bunch of us riders, and you would be as safe as in God's pocket. The Hickorys are too busy saving their own hides to bother you anyhow."

"How much of this is just talk to get Homer to go back with you? It listens right nice, but a man like Mr. Broderick ain't gonna fool with lookin' out for Homer," she returned.

"He will. He's working his head off to save Cle Hightower. The Hickorys won't show up within twenty miles of the ranch. You can stay right on the place 'till the whole mess of them have been rounded up.

"And then I expect he'll cut loose from us." Mrs. Todd said.

"This ain't much of a job Homer has here, but it's better than none."

Bob argued that down and endless other doubts. Two days later he entrained with the Todd family for Atoka.

Willie May showed the newcomers to the small house that was to be their new home. She put them at ease, but without forgiveness for Bob.

The Principal Chief of the Choctaws, a planter named Byron Pierce, lived at Caddo on a piece of bottom land where he raised cotton. Broderick took Todd with him to tell his story of the Four Corners killing to Pierce. With them rode Curt Simson and Bob Lee. All four were armed with rifles and six-shooters. They did not expect to meet any of the Hickory gang, but it was as well to be prepared. They went by way of Bobby Depot and Caney Creek.

Pierce was a heavy-set man with a large head covered by a shock of long white hair. He welcomed them in the grave Indian fashion and according to the custom of the country invited them to dinner. Negro share-croppers worked his plantation. The rotund wife of one of them was both cook and waitress.

"You wanted eye witnesses to the killing of Sam Hickory," Broderick said after a hearty dinner. "Well, Lee has dug one up. He saw the whole thing. Todd, tell Chief Pierce why you waited so long before coming forward."

"I'm right ashamed of myself, sir," Todd explained. "But the fact is I ain't a fighting man. I got a little family dependent on me. The Hickory's put it to me plain that if I didn't light a shuck they would pump me full of lead. I knowed they would do it. The trouble wasn't any of mine nohow, so I lit out and kept my mouth shut until Bob Lee here hunted me up and got me to come back."

"You were in the store during the fight?" Pierce asked.

"That's whatever. The Hickorys were devilin' me when the Indian walked into the room. They turned on him. This Sam Hickory told him first off that he aimed to kill him. Hightower said he wasn't lookin' for no trouble, but they paid no attention to that. They started shooting at him. He backed outa the door. When the guns quit smoking Sam Hickory lay on the floor."

Pierce asked a lot of questions. He took Todd over every detail of the story again and again. He was impressed, but he gave no promise. He wanted other leaders of the tribe to hear Todd's story.

Upon their return to the J A B ranch, Lee and Todd noted an unsaddled horse tied to the hitch rack in front of the ranch house. The stains of hard travel were plain on its back and withers. Lee noted its color, markings, brand and peculiarities.

His eyes asked Todd a wordless question.

"Belongs to Mr. Sugg," the stableman answered. "He rode in maybe an hour ago. Miss Broderick and he drove down in the buckboard to get the mail."

Bob went into the bunk house and riveted a broken tug. From the window he saw the buckboard return. Willie May was gay and Hiram Sugg at his most confident best. Funny how girls were content to take a man for granted if he put on a good front.

Half an hour later Sugg departed. Bob heard him tell Todd that he had to be in Atoka before five o'clock.

Bob jogged down to the south pasture to fix a break in a fence reported by a boundary rider. It had rained hard the night before. The ground in the lower end was soggy. Beyond the fence was a can break and back of this the boggy lowlands leading to Sunk Bayou.

The fence had been cut. Outside of the pasture law a patch of mud showing fresh tracks of a horse. They had been made since the rain, probably within the hour. Bob swung from the saddle, grounded the bridle reins and studied the tracks.

What he saw startled him. The shoes of the animal had been worn thin, and on the outside of the front right foot there was a break in the iron. He had seen a hoof print just like that in the dust at the hitch rack beside the J A B stable.

Sugg had started north. He had told Todd that he was headed for Atoka, was due there before five o'clock. But he must have swung to the south as soon as he was out of sight of the ranch.

Where was Sugg going? Bob meant to find out. He put on his slicker and pulled down the big hat to protect his neck from the shower that would be shaken on him as the horse pushed through the cane break.

In the open land the other side of the brake he picked up the tracks again. A trail through a [illegible] to the bayou. Blazed trees rose from the water, abnormally thick in the lower trunks. Plainly this was a ford. It was a weird sort of place, but Bob picked his way among the cypress knees to the other side. A water moccasin slid from a log into the stagnant green pool as [illegible] clambered to dry land. Sugg had left the bayou at the same spot. The tracks led up the slope and into a thick growth of saplings at the top of the rise.

Bob rode cautiously. He made sure that the revolver by his side was loose in the scabbard.

Just beyond he dismounted, led his horse a few yards from the newly defined trail and tied the animal to a young tree. The trail was crooked as a snake's, winding in and out among the dense vegetation.

A wisp of smoke drifted above the brush in front of him. He guessed he must be near a camp, at a risk of making a faint noise he turned out of the trail into the thicket. An open space showed through the leaves. He believed he saw a moving figure.

He maneuvered still farther to the left, moving with the great care to avoid any sound. He came upon a lean-to built against a tree, four poles driven into the ground and a roof of boughs. There were no sides. Wriggling forward, Bob saw two men were sitting on an old fallen tree. They were Jake Hickory and Hiram Sugg. From where he lay crouched it was impossible for the watcher to hear a word of what they were saying.

Bob began to edge backward. As fast as he safely could he worked his way to the path. Once on it, he moved swiftly to his horse. As he reached for the rein a voice chilled him:

"Stick 'em up."

They'll Study Better With PROPER LIGHTS

One out of every five children in the elementary grades is afflicted with defective vision.

The proportion increases as the higher grades are reached. Eyestrain is a serious factor in this.

And much of the eyestrain is caused by poor lighting conditions in the home. Parents do not realize this and that is why we are suggesting, that in justice to your children's welfare you should get our recommendations for adequate lighting. Use the correct size bulbs in your lamps and fixtures. Call for our home lighting adviser and get her recommendations.

THREE YEARS AGO AMERICAN MOTORISTS STARTED AN

80,000,000-MILE ROAD TEST OF SYNTHETIC RUBBER

The first passenger car tires made with synthetic rubber ever to be sold to the public were announced 3 years ago by B. F. Goodrich — the Ameripol Silvertowns. In these tires over half the natural rubber was replaced by the B. F. Goodrich synthetic, Ameripol.

The result was the greatest road test of passenger car tires in history . . . a test that totaled 80,000,000 miles. These tires proved synthetic rubber could stand punishment on passenger cars all over America.

The experience gained from this test has given B. F. Goodrich vital help in making today's tires . . . tires in which 99% of the natural rubber has been replaced with the government's "GR-S" synthetic.

But remember — there is still a rubber shortage. And every patriotic American must continue to drive carefully, and to get every possible mile from his present tires. Wasting rubber wastes America's strength.

Financial Quarters Heartened By Report Ingot Output Beats All Records.

(By Associated Press)

NEW YORK—Price variations in the stock market were generally small and slightly mixed in today's early dealings.

A trifle higher at a quiet opening were Bethlehem Steel, U. S. Rubber and Radio Corp. Among leaders unchanged to a little lower were American Telephone, Chrysler, Johns-Manville, Loew's, American Can, Sears Roebuck and Standard Oil (N. J.).

Financial quarters were heartened by th ecomment of Iron Age that bar production gains at a time like the present, when the manpower situation probably is the most unsatisfactory that industry ever has experienced, dwarf all past achievements in the nation's mines, mills and factories."

Highlighting the publication's survey was the disclosure that steel output has risen to 100.5 per cent of rated capacity for the first time since October of 1942.

Grain Market

CHICAGO GRAIN

CHICAGO — (AP) — Wheat moved upward fractionally in the opening today on some commission house buying and lack of any pressure. Oats and rye also were up slightly.

THEATERS

Spy Train.

The story of an exciting journey aboard a passenger express is told in "Spy Train" which opens today at the Ritz theater. Richard Travis and Catherine Craig play the leading roles in the picture which shows a battle of wits between two Nazi spies operating in the United States and several other passengers on the train who are attempting to regain valuable papers in the possession of the spies. Billed with "Spy Train" is "Gangs, Inc," starring Alan Ladd. Ladd who has become one of filmdom's favorite leading men is shown here in his first feature success.

Movie Held Over.

Held over to continue through Friday at the Madison theater is "Salute to the Marines," starring Wallace Beery and Fay Bainter. The picture, which was filmed in technicolor to record the beauty of the tropical background, is an original story by Robert Andrews. "The Devil With Hitler" is the co-feature. It features Alan Mowbray, Bobby Watson, George E. Stone, Marjorie Woodworth and Douglas Fowley.

Award Warner Stars.

"Watch on the Rhine," showing at the Ohio stars Bette Davis and Paul Lukas. It is based on Lillian Hellman's famous play of the same name. Lukas is in the role he enacted in the Broadway hit of the same name for which he won the award of the New York Drama League for the outstanding portrayal of the season. "Der Fuehrer's Face," a comedy satire which contains probably the greatest novelty song hit of the year which bears the title by that name is the co-attraction. This is a Walt Disney picture starring Donald Duck.

IN THE CAPITAL-- By Raymond Clapper

WASHINGTON — Something is happening in American thinking when a Republican politician with the sensitive antenna of Gov. Dewey says we should have a permanent military alliance with Great Britain.

He accepts, in his talks at the Mackinac island Republican conference, the necessity of joining other nations to use force to subdue future aggressors.

Clapper

Gov. Dewey recognizes, as a great many people are coming to recognize, that our attempt to keep our own freedom of action has been a failure. We have refused to make alliances. We have refused to commit ourselves to any future course of action.

But that has not given us freedom of action. Instead, twice in the lifetime of this generation, the United States has been forced for self-protection to go into world wars which it did not start.

Our very inaction, our very attempt to preserve our isolation, has perhaps encouraged the starting of those wars which we found it impossible to escape.

One well-known American citizen talked with Nazi Foreign Minister Ribbentrop shortly before the present war began. He told Ribbentrop that if Great Britain were threatened, the United States would intervene in the war as she had done before. Ribbentrop laughed at the idea. He said America would never go to war a second time. He cited the isolationist sentiment in America as proof that Germany did not need to fear American intervention.

Would Hitler have dared to plunge into war if he had been certain that the whole weight of the United States would be thrown against him?

If the principal industrial nations now join together, and make it clear that they will crack down with force whenever any nation threatens the peace, the chances are that nobody will dare invite certain disaster by starting trouble—and certainly not after an example has been made of the first offender.

This is all very bitter swallowing for men like Senators Taft and Vandenberg who prefer the plush horses of the gay nineties. They will try to distract attention from the realities and play with wordy generalizations about sovereignty. But as Chairman Tom Connally of the senate foreign relations committee said the other day, every time we sign a treaty we sign away some of our sovereignty.

As a footnote, Gov. Dewey's press conference remarks at Mackinac island indicate his conviction has been clarified and strengthened by Walter Lippmann's book, "U. S. Foreign Policy." That columnist's brief analysis has had a deep effect on the thinking of Americans about our place in the world. Indeed, this has been one of the constructive influences of the last few months, during a time when our official leadership seems to have gone dry.

Secretary Hull has been communicative chiefly in disputing with columnists. And for some reason which is not clear, President Roosevelt has come to have a contemptuous attitude toward his press conference. Once these meetings were useful in giving the public, through the newspaper correspondents, a better understanding of what was going on. Now the Roosevelt press conferences are brushed off with almost no information at all so that they are coming to be almost as unproductive as those of Coolidge, except that Roosevelt uses up more words in telling nothing.

At the moment it is left to some Republicans and a columnist's book to set the American people thinking about the most fateful decision that this generation must make.

FAIR ENOUGH-- By Westbrook Pegler

NEW YORK—This is written on Labor day. The press and the air are filled with platitudes about labor, as though the scheming demagogs of the New Deal party and the swollen tyrants and racketeers of the union movement, all proteges of the New Deal and the Wagner act, were the whole body of labor in the United States. Some of this poison gas is the product of ignorance and superstition, but it is for the greater part deliberate, intelligent evil, intended to persuade American men and women that the Wagner act is holy writ, to be changed only at the peril of the workers.

Pegler

The truth is that the Wagner act as it stands today, is a devilish conspiracy against those very liberties and freedoms which it purports to guarantee and for which the mass of this nation is fighting and otherwise striving today. It is being used to herd unwilling citizens into unions which have no responsibility to the government or the community under big union bosses whose contempt for the human dignity and rights of the individual man is expressed in every degree of oppression from political dragooning. As practiced by those New Deal models of union statesmanship, Sidney Hillman and David Dubinsky, to the coldblooded murder of a brave Chicago citizen who was shot dead on the street near his home in Chicago after he had given information to the United States treasury regarding the financial affairs of the operating engineers.

Hillman has flatly proposed that all unions in the state of New York join in the so-called and miscalled American Labor party and pay into that organization's treasury a per capita tax on every member, regardless of the individual member's political devotion. He sees nothing wrong in that because he is an eminent New Deal union politician and this miscalled American Labor party is a subsidiary of the New Deal. Similarly, Dubinsky's unions have ordered their members, regardless of their political principles and affiliations, to turn out for political rallies for Dubinsky's candidates also New Dealers, under pain of a fine of $1. He also has required Americans to contribute to foreign charities and to a fund to carry on "underground" or espionage work in the conquered countries.

Dubinsky sees nothing wrong in these violations of the rights of American workers.

These facts show the extent to which Hillman and Dubinsky have become assimilated or Americanized. More important, they show the extent to which European political thought and practice have been imposed on masses of American workers under the patronage and guidance of the New Deal.

Two of the men against whom the murdered Chicago workers gave information to the federal treasury are high officials of the operating engineers union, a brutal racket which nevertheless has siphoned fabulous sums of federal tax money off the earnings of workers on national war projects. The night before he was killed this worker was chased through the streets and threatened. He then appealed to the treasury's representative but that did no good. He was waylaid and shot dead, leaving 11 children. Far from protecting or avenging its patriotic informant the national government let him go to his death and has never raised a hand to avenge him or even to break up the racket on federal war projects which still operates boldly to this hour.

At San Mateo, Cal., a patriotic housewife answered an urgent appeal for emergency workers at a cannery where a large supply of food would spoil if it were not preserved immediately. She traveled by train to the cannery and was told that she must either join the union or pay tribute to the union as a non-member for the right to do her patriotic duty.

She told the cannery people to strike her name off the list and returned home.

"Why should I, with no desire or need to join any union, be forced to do so in order to help our country in time of need?" she asks.

Those who are responsible for the New Deal party's labor policy are no friends of American labor. They are enemies of all Americans, and of everything American.

ON BROADWAY-- By Dorothy Kilgallen

Speaking for Myself.

SEPTEMBER in New York finds me in my usual autumn state of pleasant excitement. September is Gotham's festival time, the actual beginning of the year in our community. Other cities may date their calendars and make their resolutions as of Jan. 1, but between the Hudson and East rivers, Sept. 1 is the day when things begin to happen. Familiar faces reappear along the Stem, the air in restaurants where producers gather is electric with heady plans for a season of unprecedented successes. The summer-long sluggishness of the town vanishes and daily in the papers appear announcements of events that harbinger an exciting fall.

Kilgallen

Announcements that the revival of "Connecticut Yankee" indicates the separation of Rodgers from Hart nears an end. . . . That Sigmund Romberg is bringing his concert orchestra to Carnegie Hall so Manhattan can waggle its head in waltz time along with the provincials who have heard the program. . . . That a new musical with Mary Martin is forthcoming, and we will be humming Kurt Weill tunes. . . . That Joe E. Lewis is back in town from the battlefronts. . . . That a new comedian named Danny Thomas is coming into the spot that launched Danny Kaye. . . . That dozens of plays, full of promise, will lift their curtains in the nights to come.

In all, it's a time of year when Gothamites feel they can accomplish anything - write a hit show, marry the boss's daughter, become the toast of 52nd street, get tickets for "Oklahoma!" . . . In short, anything.

I think one of our national magazines made a mistake in attitude last week when it took a vicious belt at Frank Sinatra for his sophomorism which nobody ever denied. I think it is a mistake because this was an adult magazine, and adults are not the ones who are Frank's most frenetic fans. The piece won't make any difference to the swooners who mobbed the Pasadena station the day he arrived in California, and grown-ups don't know what all the Sinatra shouting is about, anyway.

It was a little like coming out against lollipops because they are so juvenile.

From Yvette, the blond night club singer just back from overseas, I have been hearing about a current London song hit—the one called "I'm Going to Get Lit Up When They Light Up Dear Old London." Listening to Yvette run through the lyrics I began to speculate about what will happen along Broadway on that fabulous day when victory ends our blackout. It's a pleasant thing to ponder, and I have a pretty clear picture of what should happen along the Stem on that fabulous day.

First of all, though the gas shortage will end, there won't be an automobile visible from 42nd street clear up to 55th street. The whole Times Square area will be one milling, yelling, cheering mass of people just standing there grinning at one another in one great big tight squeeze. At the big musical shows, the casts will be trying vainly to perform while beaming drunks wander onstage to join the dancing and every now and then somebody out front will drown out the actors by shouting "Wow" or maybe "Hooray!"

In all the night clubs it'll be New Year eve, king-sized. The orchestras will play, but nobody will listen. They'll just stand around feeling good, picking up boys in uniform and carrying them around on their shoulders.

STILL CRITICAL

CLEVELAND — (INS) — Archbishop Joseph Schrembs, 77-year-old head of the Cleveland Catholic diocese, remained in "critical" condition today at St. John's hospital.

CONGRESS EYES MORE BENEFITS FOR VETERANS

Mustering-Out Pay Plan Gets Strong Support, Other Bills In Hopper.

(By Associated Press)

WASHINGTON—Reflecting the general sentiment that "nothing's too good for our boys in the service," legislation to broaden and liberalize veterans' benefits is expected to command increasing attention when congress reassembles Sept. 14 after its summer recess.

The green light for such proposals winked on at the White House in July when President Roosevelt set forth in a national broadcast a six-point program for taking care of the serviceman after "V-Day."

Weeks and months before, however, scores and possibly hundreds of bills along the same line were introduced in both houses. The veterans subcommittee of the senate finance committee has 49 such proposals pending on its calendar.

"Congress was way ahead of the president on most of this," boasted Senator Davis (R-Pa.)

Mr. Roosevelt's program called for mustering-out pay to tide a discharged soldier over until he could find a job; unemployment benefits; an opportunity for education or trade training at government expense; uninterrupted status for the soldier with regard to social security benefits; liberalized hospitalization, rehabilitation and medical care for disabled veterans, and "sufficient" pensions for disabled soldiers and sailors.

The suggested mustering-out pay plan appears to have gained strong support. Returning congressmen report the folks back home are insisting that the men who risked their lives for their country must not be reduced to peddling apples on street corners.

Congress already has approved several liberalizing measures. Veterans of the present conflict have been guaranteed the same free hospitalization service afforded the men who fought in 1917-18. The dependents of men who died in the service in this war are receiving increased pensions under a measure which became law last July 13.

In March congress approved soldiers' vocational rehabilitation legislation which provides free training for handicapped veterans together with payments of $80 a month and up while they are learning a trade.

Several moves are under way to make soldiers' insurance payable in event of total and permanent disability, as well as upon death. Half a dozen bills have been introduced in the house to increase pensions to match climbing living costs.

GILL INSISTS IT'S A RAISE

WLB Official Rules on Milk Drivers Who 'Get More Pay For Less Work.'

(By Associated Press)

CLEVELAND — Increased earnings without a corresponding increase in duties and responsibilities must be considered as a pay increase, asserts Chairman Lewis M. Gill of the Regional War Labor Board.

Gill ruled against wage increases for some 800 Cleveland milk drivers yesterday on grounds "the average monthly earnings of Cleveland retail and wholesale milk drivers advanced 43 per cent from January, 1941, to April, 1943," while "the working hours of the drivers have in fact been reduced by 10 to 25 per cent as a result of curtailed deliveries."

In view of these facts," Gill said in his written opinion, "we think the increased earnings of the drivers cannot be disregarded in a realistic application of the Little Steel formula. The situation would be different if the drivers' duties and responsibilities had increased proportionately to their earnings."

Officials of the AFL Milk and Ice Cream Drivers and Dairy Employes union contended the earnings increase did not come under the Little Steel formula and compared the raise, except for 6 per cent to increases in "take home" pay resulting from increased production on an incentive system. The May per cent increase was granted on base rates and commissions after January, 1941. The drivers may receive an increase up to 15 per cent under the Little Steel formula.

PROBES MYSTERY

Coroner Seeks Explanation of Headless Body.

MARIETTA—(AP)—Acting Coroner N. E. Kidd sought through an autopsy today to solve the mysterious decapitation death of B. C. Robinson, 82, prominent southeastern Ohio oilman, whose body was found last night in a drainage ditch near city limits. Sheriff C. Lindmood reported there was no trace of the head.

Discovery of the body by a fisherman ended a search since the morning of Aug. 26 when Robinson left his home here.

Mansfield's city council will have two clerks for the next month, one in the capacity of an assistant to the other. Council last night accepted "with regret" Robert R. Black's resignation as clerk and employed Charles J. Stecker, former county recorder, to succeed him. It then created the job of assistant clerk and hired Black for it until Oct. 7. Stecker, endorsed by the county Republican executive committee, will receive $2,000 a year. Black will be paid $166.66 for the month he helps Stecker "learn the ropes."

Evidently some Mansfield motorists have not needed their supplemental gasoline rations for the past week. Although the old-type B and C coupons have not been valid since Aug. 31, a few motorists still have not exchanged them for the new-style coupons. C. C. Beelman, chairman of the ration board, said today that Sept. 15 has been set as the deadline for exchanging the books. After that there'll be no chance of obtaining the new books and the motorist's supplemental ration will be useless.

Five youngsters did not start to school today. It was not that they were playing hookey, it was that they were unable to go. These five children live in counties surrounding Richland county and because they are physically handicapped they must go to school in Mansfield to have the benefit of the special classes which are a part of the city school system. But in order to attend school here the five youngsters need boarding homes. Any Mansfielder who would like to board two sisters seven and nine years of age, two girls six years of age or a boy for the school term is asked by the State Welfare department to contact the department offices in Columbus.

PASSES TAXI RATE RULINGS

Council Orders Charges and Zone Maps Posted In All Cabs and Buses.

A city measure requiring taxi and bus firms to post maps in their cabs and buses to show their zones and rates was passed last night by city council after a third reading. The ordinance becomes effective in 30 days.

Council made no attempt to set the taxi rates, but it will require posting of the zone and rate cards under threat of revocation of licenses to operate in the city.

The taxi and bus companies must prepare and post their own cards, making them large enough so that passengers will have no trouble reading them. Firms which permit drivers to charge more than the price listed on the cards may lose their licenses, City Solicitor Leslie K. Wagner said.

Councilman George C. Kyle, sponsor of the measure, said he hoped the cards will help clear up the widespread confusion about taxi rates.

"The intent is to show the public what the companies charge. If you get inside a cab and don't like the rate, you can get out," Kyle said.

WRECK DEATH TOLL NOW 78, TRACK CLEARED

Six Are In Critical Condition, Relatives Go To Morgue To Identify Victims.

(By Central Press)

PHILADELPHIA — Workmen cleared the last of the Congressional limited wreckage from the Pennsylvania railroad's main line right-of-way in Philadelphia today as physicians battled to keep the wreck's death toll of 78 from rising.

At least six persons were listed as critical among the 115 injured in the nation's greatest railroad tragedy since 1918, when a crash at Nashville, Tenn., killed 115.

Working crews labored by floodlight until early today to remove the wreckage. Six cars of the limited upset when a burned-out journal box dropped an axle on the first coach in the middle of the train.

Meanwhile, friends and relatives filed through the city morgue attempting to identify many of the crushed and mangled victims. Twenty-one were still unidentified, most of them women, more than 30 hours after the accident.

Twelve bodies were removed from around the base of the signal tower girder which was struck by the first of the wrecked cars—an old type day coach. The car twisted to its side and was sliced in half just over the windows as it hurtled into the upright girder.

Six governmental agencies, headed by 20 FBI agents, continued separate investigations and the interstate commerce commission and the Pennsylvania public service commission scheduled a joint hearing for today to hear the results of an examination of the journal box which the railroad said caused the crash. The meeting will be closed.

The express, one of the fastest electric trains in the world, was filled with Labor Day vacationists as it roared through Philadelphia without a stop. On a straight stretch of track near the Frankford junction number seven car buckled, throwing off another day coach, two diners and two Pullmans. The engine and first six cars continued on for about a block but were not derailed.

HALTS ORDERS

County AAA Lists Supply of Lime For Soil Building.

The huge demand for lime to help Richland county farmers meet their Triple-A farm program today had forced the county AAA office to stop accepting lime orders from county farmers, except those in Worthington township.

With farms forced to depend entirely upon their soil-building practices to help them earn their AAA checks, the demand for lime has shown a marked increase this summer, members of the county AAA committee said. The lack of transportation facilities also has forced the county committee to keep its lime orders within a certain limit, it was said.

Farmers cooperating with the AAA program order the lime through the county office and pay for it from the money they receive in government checks for improving their land. The lime is used on certain types of land to improve its productivity.

UNCONDITIONAL SURRENDER OF ITALY REVEALED

Eisenhower Grants Armistice as Germans Say U. S. Troops Move Toward New Goals.

sides. That moment has now arrived.

"The possibility of a German move to forestall publication of the armistice by the Italian government was discussed during the negotiations to meet this eventuality, it was agreed that one of the senior Italian military representatives should not return to Rome He is now in Sicily.

"Further, Marshal Badoglio arranged to send the text of his proclamation to Allied headquarters."

The text of Badoglio's proclamation:

"The Italian government, recognizing the impossibility of continuing the unequal struggle against the overwhelming power of the enemy, with the object of avoiding further and more grievous harm to the nation, requested an armistice for Gen. Eisenhower, commander in chief of the Anglo-American Allied forces.

"This request has been granted.

"The Italian forces will, therefore, cease all acts of hostility against the Anglo-American forces wherever they may be met. They will, however, oppose attacks from any other quarter."

Only a few hours before the capitulation, the German high command had acknowledged a new Allied landing on the Gulf of Eufemia, 40 miles north of the British Eighth army's original beachhead, and a Berlin broadcast said that two large Anglo-American convoys had sailed from Palermo, Sicily.

The broadcast said the new Allied expeditions totalling "roughly 200 merchant and transport vessels" indicated that American forces "are about to carry out further landing attempts somewhere."

Extensive Allied ship movements in North African harbors, especially in Tunisia, also were reported

Berlin said four or five British infantry battalions landed at Pizzo on the lower part of Eufemia gulf in a drive to cut off "German rearguards to the south and southwest."

This indicated that at least some Nazi troops were cut off by the surrender.

The collapse of Italy, within a few short weeks after the downfall of Premier Benito Mussolini, meant a body blow to the Germans, who had made every effort to keep Italy in the war and thus postpone the inevitable day of an Allied invasion of the German homeland itself.

With Italy, the junior partner of the Berlin-Tokyo-Rome Axis, driven out of the war, the Allies presumably will soon be in a position to bomb Germany from the south—as it is now being mercilessly blasted from the British Isles in the north—and may well shorten the European conflict by many months

Germany had hoped to make Italy a battleground and it had been reported that tens of thousands of German reinforcements had poured into Italy in recent weeks with a view to defending at least the rich industrial areas of northern Italy particularly in the Po river valley

Prime Minister Churchill had characterized Italy's strength as one-tenth that of Germany.

Knocking Italy out of World War II parallels the first capitulation among the central powers—that of Bulgaria—in the first World war.

The first Axis power to collapse, Italy quit almost exactly four years after the current conflict began Sept. 1, 1939, with the German invasion of Poland. Italy entered the present conflict June 10, 1940.

Bulgaria, crumpling under a brilliant offensive carried out by French, British, Italian, Greek, Serbian, Czecho-Slovak and Jugoslavic forces, signed an armistice of unconditional surrender Sept. 29, 1918. That was four years and two months after World war 1 started July 28, 1914 with the Austria-Hungary declaration of war against Serbia .

World War I was all over 43 days after Bulgaria surrendered. In fact it was only four days later (Oct. 3) that Germany, suffering from crushing blows by Allied armies and strangling economically in the grip of the British naval blockade, sent to President Wilson an appeal for an immediate armistice.

But before the armistice with Germany was worked out and signed Nov. 11, 1918, the two other remaining central powers, Turkey and Austria-Hungary, capitulated Both gave up on Oct. 30 Factors leading to their surrender were the rout of the Turks in Syria by the British forces of General Allenby and the rolling back of the Austro-Hungary army in northern Italy by Italian forces reinforced by French and British troops.

RUSSIA — Berlin radio admits German troops evacuate big steel center of Stalino in Donets Basin; Red Armies storm within 75 miles of Pripet marshes in drive on Kiev. Capture 200 towns, kill 6,000 Germans in advances up to 12 miles; autumn rains begin.

BALKANS—Albanian guerrilla leaders expected Allies invasion of Balkans within a month. Germans rush troops from Yugoslavia into Albania to meet possible Allied thrust from southern Italy

EUROPEAN AIR WAR — Allied daylight raiders renew assault on continent. Paris radio says U. S. planes hit Amiens and Abbeville.

WASHINGTON—Gen Marshall discloses plans for smashing Hitler's European fortress area are virtually complete and include invasion of northwest Europe, says Japan now thrown back on defensive

NEW GUINEA — U. S. parachute troops seize Japanese airdrome 20 miles northwest of Lae. Allies tighten trap on 20,000-man Japanese garrison; Australians rout enemy 10 miles east of Lae.

CHINA — American warplanes blast Japanese in Hankow area

On the Soviet front, a Berlin broadcast acknowledged that German troops had evacuated Stalino, Russia's 12th largest city The Red armies advanced all along the 600-mile southern front and sent spearheads racing within 75 miles of the Pripet swamps in the western Ukraine

Stalino is a big steel center, in the heart of the Ruch Donets coal and iron basin and is of prime strategic importance as a major bastion defending the Germans' "second wall" of fortifications on the Dnieper river

As the Red armies pressed their triumphant march of reconquest, Moscow announced that since the start of the great summer battles in mid-July the Germans had lost more than 420,000 killed, 1,080,000 wounded and 38,600 captured, while the Soviets regained at least 30,000 square miles of territory.

Vichy Says France 'In Great Peril'

LONDON—(INS)—"Great peril is threatening France," the Vichy radio said today.

"The Allied landing in Calabria is merely a blind," the broadcaster said, "in order to screen invasion elsewhere — maybe in France.

"Harsh measures must be taken to preserve order."

Tries to Explain Aid to Germans

MADRID — (INS) — The Spanish Blue division is fighting with Germany against the Russians only because Spain fears the spread of communism after this war, a high Falange party official declared today in a broadcast in which he denied that the nation is totalitarian in nature

The presence of the Blue division on the Russian front has no political significance, Minister Secretary-General Jose Luis Arrese of the Falange (state) party, asserted.

Will Defend Paris Street By Street

LONDON — (INS) — The Germans have decided to defend Paris "street by street" and not declare the former French capital an open city in event of Allied invasion, reports to London morning newspapers said today.

A Zurich dispatch to the Daily Express said notices had been posted in Paris by German authorities ordering residents of the city to move to specified concentration camps when invasion comes

Announces Donets Cleared of Nazis

NEW YORK — (AP) — Marshal Stalin triumphantly announced in a special order of the day today that "the Donets basin is cleared of the Germans"

The announcement, broadcast by the Moscow radio and recorded by the federal communications, added, "our troops captured a number of cities, including the city of Stalino."

The action came, the Soviet premier continued, "as a result of skilled maneuvers and a determined offensive in the last six days"

Yanks Sink Six Jap Vessels at Hankow

CHUNGKING—(U P)— American P-38 Lightnings, new to the Chinese war theater, and P-40 Warhawks sank six Japanese vessels, set one afire and probably sank three others on the Yangtze river below Hankow Monday, an American communique announced today

The vessels sunk at Shihweiyao included boats of 250 and 160-foot length, two barges and two tugs. The planes dive-bombed and strafed shipping facilities and caused extensive damage to warehouses and an iron foundry, where four locomotives also were blown up.

It's Ike's Story, Says White House

WASHINGTON — (INS) — The White House officially announced today that all information on the surrender of Italy would come from Gen. Dwight Eisenhower, Allied commander.

Secretary Stephen T. Early said that President Roosevelt had told him to say.

"It is General Eisenhower's story. Let him tell it"

Secretary of State Hull at a news conference also refused comment on the Italian capitulation.

MANSFIELD, OHIO, WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 8, 1943.

According to a plastics engineer, postwar books will be printed on edible paper—thus providing food for body as well as mind.

As school starts it seems timely to recall an old schoolroom wall motto: "There is no excellence without great labor"—which is still good, even if sometimes ignored.

It may be assumed that an "X" will serve in lieu of signature on income tax reports, when necessary, the same as with other documents which require that name be signed.

Republicans Sidestep 'Force' Issue

REPUBLICAN LEADERS, meeting at Mackinac island, are apparently in full agreement that the war should be won as quickly as possible and that there should then be co-operation with other nations in an attempt to establish permanent world peace.

There was no indication of disagreement on these fine objectives, with which all Americans can be in full accord, but Republican spokesmen appear as unsettled as others in the matter of best procedure to attain lasting peace.

It is agreed that military aggression on the part of other nations should be prevented by action of co-operative nations, but there seems to be quibbling about whether this should be accomplished by force or by some form of world court designed to adjudicate disputes.

A high note of idealism is struck in the proposal to work toward a policy that "will comprehend other means than war for the determination of international controversies and the attainment of a peace that will prevail by virtue of inherent reciprocal interests and its spiritual foundation. . . ."

While this is attractive in theory it does not appear to meet conditions that have been brought about by militarists of Germany, Italy and Japan, and against which there can be no assurances of future safety except by use of force.

As might be expected, the Mackinac island pronouncement expresses opposition to the present federal administration on matters of individual liberty, free enterprise and states' rights, with a slap at New Deal "socialism" and government bureaucracy.

A conclusion being reached by many who have been studying proposals of so-called "postwar planners" is also stated in the resolutions adopted: "At this time a detailed program for the accomplishment of these great objectives would be impractical, specific commitments by this council, by the Republican party, or by the nation, would be unwise. We cannot know now what situation may obtain at the war's end."

Few will disagree with that conclusion.

Foresees Future of Hard Work

HARD WORK, rather than a return of pleasant dreams of ease without effort, is the best that can be foreseen for postwar America by Russell Weisman, Cleveland economist and columnist, who expressed his views before a Mansfield civic club audience yesterday.

According to Mr. Weisman, America has been deviating dangerously from sound policies of industry, production and thrift as essentials of individual and national well being, and, after passing through the economic folly of an "easy money era," drifted into racketeering, speculative and "give-it-away" policies from which a change must be made if a sound and solvent nation is to be restored after the war.

"The war has made it clear," said Mr. Weisman, "that production is the really important thing—and production is as necessary to peace-time prosperity as to war-time requirements. There can be no production without work and there can be no world-wide relief of distress without spread of productive labor and economic sufficiency of all nations."

In battling for the institution of democracy and against dictatorship, Mr. Weisman warned, it should not be lost sight of that strongly centralized government trends toward dictatorship and he advised early postwar return of authority and responsibility to states and local units of government.

Any group casting about for a central figure in a public forum meeting freed of the element of party politics would find Russell Weisman a suitable choice, with assurance of a period of lively discussion following his talk.

Synthetic Tire Contracts Sought

CONTRACTS must soon be let for 30,000,000 synthetic rubber tires for civilian use, and rubber industries entrenched at Akron insist that the tires shall not be produced outside of their area. It can be readily understood how they feel about it. They did much to create this vast industry, and they want to continue benefiting from the contributions they have made to American progress. It will be hard, though, to keep their industry fenced off from the rest of the country.

East, south and west naturally want rubber production centers of their own. And surely in so vast a country, with so many claims for free enterprise, there should be room to spread around rubber production as well as the rubber itself.

There's Also a Sad Iron Shortage

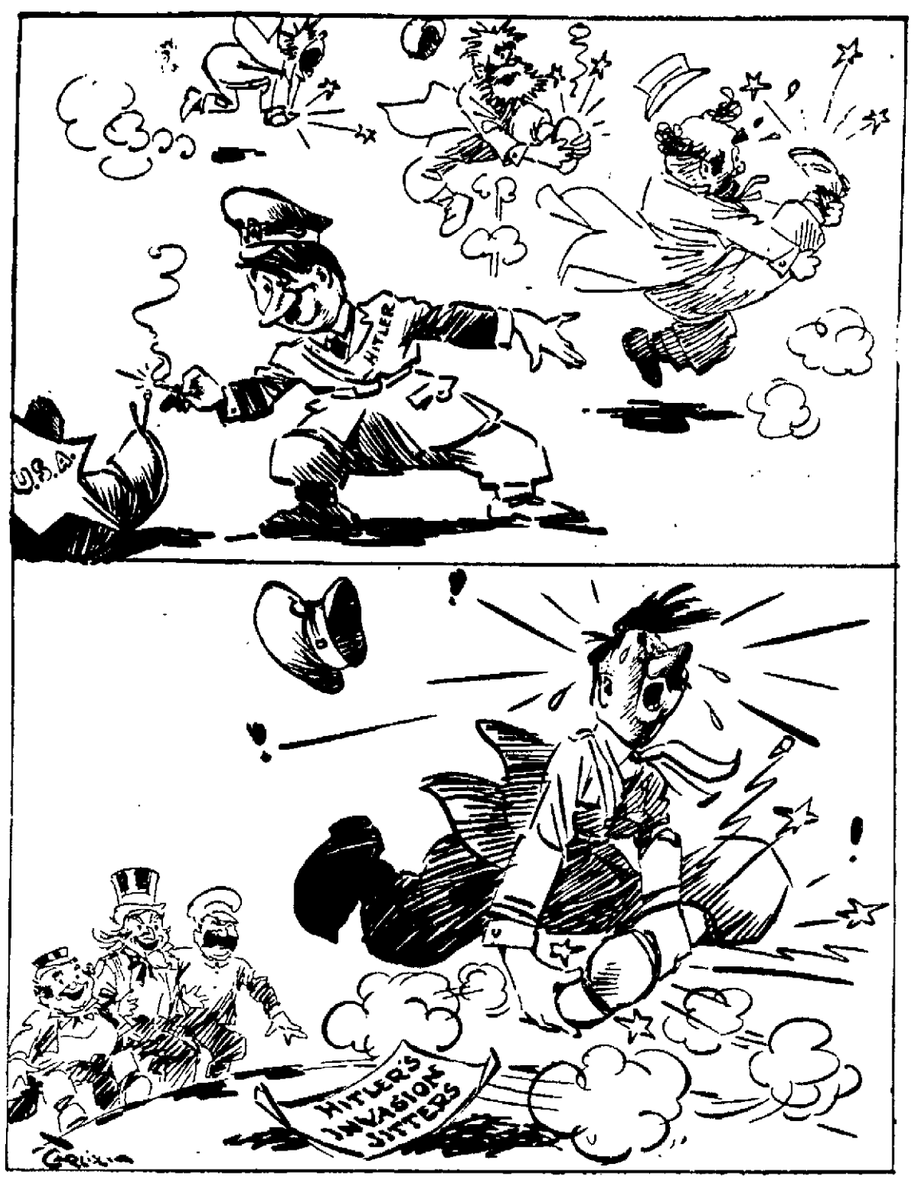
NOW it's sad irons which are sadly missing. Not only is the electric variety in demand, but any kind of flat iron which can be heated and used to iron clothing. Air cadets, WAC's, mothers want them. Brides beg for them for wedding presents. But where are the irons to meet the demand?

There used to be plenty of laundries, in the old days, and they functioned briskly and efficiently. Now the laundries cannot get help enough. Many of them have had to go out of business altogether, and the rest move so slowly that, in some cities, it takes three weeks to get clothing back. Most people cannot wait that long, so they are doing their own washing and ironing—including hundreds of men and women in the services.

One of the unforeseeable consequences of cutting down the manufacture and sale of civilian goods was this shortage of tools for laundry work. An early need to be filled as metal and manufacture are allotted for civilian goods should be that of electric irons.

A Reno newspaper says Tommy Manville is "making a mockery" of Nevada's divorce courts—but it appears that Tommy is merely taking advantage of the "mockery" of marriage that was made by the Nevada legislature in making that state a mecca for moral polygamists seeking legal sanction for promiscuity.

INVASION "HOT-FOOT" GOES INTO REVERSE



Invasion Across Channel Looms As Allied Striking Power Gains

By DEWITT MACKENZIE

SINCE invasion of France across the English channel is one of the paramount issues of the moment, I think we must place among foremost of developments an announcement in the Washington Evening Star.

The Star's foreign affairs writer, Constantine Brown, says he learns on the highest authority that Gen. George C. Marshall, U. S. chief of staff, will be named commander in chief of any Allied invasion of the continent from England.

This means, Brown points out, "that preparations for operating across the English channel are sufficiently advanced to select a leader." He emphasizes, however, that well-informed circles say this mustn't be taken as meaning the invasion is ready to begin within the next few weeks.

Well, whether the invasion comes soon or late, what we have to keep in mind is this: When it does arrive, and we have an Allied army safely ashore in France, it's going to place an unescapable squeeze on Herr Hitler, for he will be between the Russians on the east and the other United Nations on the west.

Fitting this announcement like a glove is the news of the continued Red advance against the Nazi right wing. Soviet forces are smashing at the gates of the big industrial city and mining center of Stalino which is the key position of the Germans in the rich Donets basin.

Farther north the Reds have tightened their grip on the strategic Bryansk-Kiev railway. In the Smolensk sector, along the route where Napoleon broke his back, the Germans have been counter-attacking fiercely, but Moscow reports all thrusts repulsed.

So goes the story on the eastern front until we have a composite picture of the great Nazi army being steadily beaten back along the entire 600 miles of the German right flank. The situation of the Hitlerites is indeed serious.

PERHAPS the autumn rains, which are about due, may intervene to give the Germans a chance to pull their badly mauled line together. But then will come the cold weather to freeze the ground, and the Red attacks will be resumed.

Out in the southwest Pacific our General MacArthur is personally commanding a brilliant operation which has trapped the Japs in the Lae-Salamaua sector of New Guinea. Twenty thousand of the enemy have been caught in a vice which is closing to annihilate them.

Allied success continues in Italy. Meantime the Rome radio continues to fish for peace.

Now the Office of Price administration is sending representatives around asking cities to pass ordinances that will enforce price ceilings. That has a sound exactly like the thud of a falling hot potato.

But the federal boys have got an idea, there. They say, "We'll make the rules. All you've got to do is enforce them." If that system could be worked out, the treasury department, the FBI and a lot of other federal units could probably get rid of a lot of irksome responsibilities.

* * *

The only trouble is that for a law or even a bureaucratic edict to be effective the people have got to believe in it. Most everybody sees the outright necessity for price ceilings if we don't want runaway inflation. They just get tired of backing a team that keeps fumbling the ball.

Adolescent Problems

THE PERIOD of adolescence, or period of prematurity, is roughly from the age of 12 to the age of 18. It is one of the most painful periods of human life both for the adolescent and the onlookers.

Childhood is a relatively stable period of not-very-rapid physical change or growth, gradual mental development and spiritual retardation. The child is willing to have his rules made for him; he is, within limits, obedient, takes medicine, eats what is put before him (again within limits, and with some additions of his own), takes direction about his physical welfare.

Then, of a sudden, these adventures in life put away childish things—not yet a man, or woman, no longer a child, they turn yearningly in both directions. The other sex is discovered, and as is the case with most discoveries, results in confusion. Growth is so rapid that they are somewhat ridiculous. Visions and ambitions assail them—their reading, if they do any, becomes adult. They are moody, shy, sulky, loud, or obstreperous, as the case may be.

Symptoms Magnified.

In wartime all these normal symptoms of adolescence are magnified and distorted. More than ever adolescents need parental control. And that is just what is now too often lacking. A school physician is quoted as saying that the employment of mothers as well as fathers in wartime industry is having a most profound and unqualified bad influence on adolescents.

There should be no question about the draft deferment of fathers nor for the refusal to accept mothers in industry unless proper provision is made for the care of adolescents as well as infants and children.

The increase in the nervous manifestations and personality disorders of adolescence is, to say the very least, disturbing.

Night terrors is one of these. It is possible that physical causes may operate in some of these cases — partial asphyxia due to adenoids, for instance. But most of them are conditioned by the experiences of waking life.

Effect of War News.

Radio programs late into the night is a specific example. I know many men and women who have come fairly sober from the cup of life, who acknowledge to me that their heads are not strong enough to stand a news broadcast every fifteen minutes, even every day. How must the newscasts brewed with strong flavoring extracts affect the adolescent.

Acne, or pimples, is another widespread adolescent curse. But the most unfortunate effect is on the patient's personality. There is no cure for it, and parents drag the patient from doctor to doctor until time finally puts in the curative licks.

Teasing and natural sensitiveness to appearances may make the victim so miserable that the effect lasts into adult life. Wise parental sympathy and advice are needed.

Dave Boone Says:

WELL, the Labor day rush is over and the American public was pretty considerate of the soldiers and sailors. It left them a little room to stand in the aisles. In some cases train crews managed to find room, too.

* * *

You can't do much with the general public by appeals. I've never seen such heavy travel as there's been ever since the government began asking folks not to travel.

* * *

I wouldn't be surprised if some folks were riding around on trains just to protect their constitutional rights and their own sense of personal liberty.

* * *

That third war loan drive is around and "back the attack" is a fine slogan. Don't stand too far back. Back it by getting as far front as you can and taking all the bonds you can.

* * *

Don't forget that although you're backing the attack now by buying these bonds they will be backing you when the war is over.

Stamp Collection Is President's Best Relaxation From Worries

WASHINGTON—When President Barclay of the Negro Republic of Liberia was concluding his official visit to Washington, President Roosevelt said to him:

"When you get back home, don't forget to send me some of those stamps with leopards on them."

The remark illustrates what still remains the president's favorite hobby, despite the war. There is nothing which helps so much to give him a moment's relief from the worry of war as having a volume of stamps sent up on his breakfast tray on a Sunday morning.

And on most Sunday mornings he shuffles new stamps, pastes them in his albums, and personally keeps his collection up to date. Some collectors employ experts to keep their collections in shape, and the president has had a small amount of help from Gerard Beekman, who also helps Secretary Ickes. For the most part, however, Roosevelt handles his stamp collection personally.

Although the president's stamp collection is probably the most famous in the world, it is not the best. The late King George V far surpassed him, had some 300 volumes. The president's collection numbers only 40 volumes, with from 25,000 to 30,000 stamps.

In this country, also, the president's collection is easily surpassed by those of Sol Newberry, of Chicago, and E. Albert Eisenstadt, an army doctor from Pichcr, Okla.

Though he may miss some of the fine points of philatelism, the president misses none of the fun. When he trades stamps with Harold Ickes, they do it as a couple of boys—trading stamp for stamp, and not bargaining for value.

The president has received many a rare set from foreign governments—an autographed stamp from Ignace Paderewski of Poland; plus some rare Turkish stamps sent by the late Kemal Ataturk. And when Soviet Ambassador Litvinoff came to the White House one day, he carried under his arm a handsome book of Russian stamps, embossed with the hammer and sickle.

Technically, it is against the law for the president to receive these gifts. To protect presidents against the blandishments of foreign princes, the Founding Fathers wrote into the Constitution a provision that "no person holding any office of profit or trust . . . shall, without the consent of congress, accept of any present, or title of any kind whatever, from any king, prince, or foreign state."

However, nobody seems greatly worried about whether the president receives pictures of piano-playing presidents, Turkish scimitars, or Liberian leopards, so long as he gets some fun out of it.

Note: Many recent presidents have been stamp collectors, including Coolidge, Cleveland and Teddy Roosevelt. Mr. and Mrs. Hoover had an excellent collection of Chinese and Australian stamps when they lived in those countries, but did not keep it up when they returned home.

President and Patterson.

BRITISH newspaper publisher Lord Beaverbrook has been telling about a session his close friend Joseph M. Patterson, of the New York Daily News, had with President Roosevelt shortly after Pearl Harbor.

Patterson, one of the newspaper geniuses of our generation, had supported Roosevelt on 90 per cent of his policies, was one of the few big publishers advocating a third term. But Patterson felt we could stay out of war, wrote pungent, powerful anti-war editorials which got under the president's skin.

The Pearl Harbor attack, proving the president right, came as a blow, but Patterson was man enough to admit his error and asked for an appointment with "the Chief."

The president later told Beaverbrook with some glee how Patterson was ushered into his office, how the room was dark except for a reading lamp, and how FDR pretended not to see his caller, kept him standing—according to Roosevelt's own calculation—for five minutes. Finally the president said:

"Oh, hello, Joe, what can I do for you?"

"I've come to tell you, Mr. President," replied Patterson, "that I was wrong, and to offer my services to my country in any capacity which you may command."

The president looked for a moment at the publisher of the world's most widely circulated newspaper, standing like a boy before a school teacher. Then he said:

"I tell you what you can do for me, Joe. You can go back and re-read all those editorials you wrote about our not getting into war."

An Explosion That Shook a Mountain And a General Who Was "Ordered Around."

SOMEWHERE IN SICILY—(By Wireless)—We are writing these few days about the spectacular bridging of a practically bottomless hole blown in a northern Sicilian coast road by the Germans in their retreat toward Messina.

It took our engineers 24 hours to bridge this enormous gap, but the men of the Third Division didn't just sit and twiddle their thumbs during that time.

The infantry was sent across on foot and continued after the Germans. Some supplies and guns were sent around the road-block by boat, and even the engineers themselves continued on ahead by boat. They had discovered other craters blown in the road several miles ahead. These were smaller ones that could be filled in by a bulldozer except that you couldn't get a bulldozer across that vast hole they were trying to bridge.

So the engineers commandeered two little Sicilian fishing boats about twice the size of rowboats. They lashed them together, nailed planking across them and ran the bulldozer up onto this improvised barge. They tied an amphibious jeep in front of it, and went chugging around Point Calava at about one mile an hour.

As we looked down at them laboring along so slowly, Lieut. Col. Leonard Bingham, commanding officer of the Third Division's 10th Engineers, grinned and said, "There goes the engineers' homemade navy."

THE real navy during the night had carried forward supplies and guns in armed landing craft. These were the cause of a funny incident around midnight. Our engineers had drilled and laid blasting charges to blow off part of the rock wall that overhung the Point Calava crater.

When all was ready, everybody went back in the tunnel to get out of the way. When the blast went off, the whole mountain shook and you quavered with positive belief that the tunnel was coming down. The noise there in the silent night was shocking.

Now just as this happened, a small fleet of these naval craft was passing in the darkness, just offshore. The sudden blast alarmed them. They apparently thought they were being fired upon from the shore. For just as our men were returning to their work at the crater edge, there came ringing up from the dark water below, so clear it sounded like an execution order, the resounding naval command, "Prepare to return fire."

Boy, you should have seen our men scatter. They hit the ground and scampered back into the tunnel as though Stukas were diving on them. We don't know to this day exactly what happened out there, but we do know they never did fire.

* * *

DURING the night Maj. Gen. Lucian Truscott, commanding the Third Division, came up to see how the work was coming along. Bridging that hole was his main interest in life that night. He couldn't help any, of course, but somehow he couldn't bear to leave. He stood around and talked to officers, and after a while he went off a few feet to one side and sat down on the ground and lit a cigaret.

A moment later, a passing solier saw the glow and leaned over and said, "Hey, gimme a light, will you?" The general did and the soldier never knew he had been ordering the general around.

General Truscott, like many men of great action, has the ability to refresh himself by tiny catnaps of five or ten minutes. So instead of going back to his command post and going to bed he stretched out there against some rocks and dozed off. One of the working engineers came past, dragging some air hose. It got tangled up in the general's feet. The tired soldier was annoyed, and he said crossly to the dark, anonymous figure on the ground, "If you're not working, get the hell out of the way."

The general got up and moved farther back without saying a word.

THE men worked on and on and every one of the company officers stayed throughout the night, just to be there to make decisions when difficulties arose. But I got so sleepy I couldn't stand it, and I caught a commuting truck back to the company camp and turned in.

An hour before daylight I heard them rout out a platoon that had been resting. They ate breakfast noisily, loaded into trucks, and were off just at dawn.

A little later three truckloads of tired men pulled into camp, gobbled some breakfast, and fell into their blankets on the ground. The feverish attack on that vital highway obstruction had not lagged a moment during the long night.

Picking Peaches

I PICKED peaches for a neighbor who manages a big fruit farm down the valley. I was surprised when he called me from our cottage to his luxurious car, parked by the roadside.

"What do you think of these?" he asked, and opened the large rear door.

I gave an involuntary exclamation of delight at the sight of six or seven heaped bushels of ripe peaches. The soft red cheeks were so tempting that I held a large one in my hand, to feel the joy of it.

"Will you help pick tomorrow?" he wondered. "There's going to be a lot, and they're just as nice as peaches grow."

"How much do you get for them?" I asked him.

"Five dollars—and I'm sure they won't go lower." (He was not trying to make a sale. He needed help and I gladly consented.)

When at 9:30 the older boys and I got to the orchard a few other pickers were already at work. Beside the vacant tenant house, under a large shade tree, I counted 25 baskets of picked fruit as fine as those I had seen before. More were being hauled in, at intervals, on a large flat-topped truck.

"I'll stay here and sell," the boss explained. "The hired man will haul in more as fast as you folks can pick them. I doubt if we can keep enough picked to supply the customers that will drive here today."

I thought of rationed gasoline plus the high price of fine fruit, and doubted my friend's reasoning.

The trees were not overly large. I was happy when the overseer buckled a picking bag about my shoulders and placed a short ladder in my hand. "Pick only the ripe ones," he cautioned.

Nothing can be prettier than a peach tree with red-ripe fruit upon it. Each peach was a good handful, and they were colored beautifully. I stopped to admire. Then I climbed right up to the top, where the largest, ripest fruit nestled about my face. The aroma of such a laden tree was like a long whiff of Eden. I am just a son of Adam.

Before I picked any peaches for in the bag, I grabbed the largest, juiciest specimen that I could see and, in ease and comfort on the topmost round I ate my fill.

By midafternoon, both the gorgeous color and the flavor of ripe peaches had grown most common. Peaches were everywhere upon the slope. The sight was pleasanter than the taste.

When we started home, cars were parked about the lawn and people were carrying peaches to them. Not ten bushels remained of what we had picked that day—and all along the gravel road, going west, I met other motorists going to the orchard. The salesman had reasoned well.

As Others See It

Does Seem Odd.

Funny, isn't it, that practically all the "civilized" peoples of the earth are at war with each other, while all the "barbarians," the savage tribes that live on the Congo River and in the forests or in snow huts in the Arctic are at peace, apparently happy and doing well.—Toledo Blade.

"Pitfalls of Love"

(A Sequel to Marriage Meddlers)

By ADELE GARRISON

DICKY'S strength and athletic training made it child's play for him to keep Ronald from bolting from the apartment in his frenzied desire to find Marion. The boy had reached the door and was fumbling with the night chain when my husband's arms went round him in a tackling movement, and before Ronald could realize what was happening to him, he was deposited in a low armchair, and Dicky was standing just back of him, with a restraining hand upon his coat collar.

"Sorry, old man!" Dicky said, as Ronald struggled, kicked and then, seeing that effective movement of any kind was impossible, fell into sullen silence, 'but I must obey the Chief's orders you know. And you'd better listen to what he has to say."

My father's voice cut into the silence that followed.

"If you would analyze what you have just heard, Ronald," he said, "you would realize that one false move now may well endanger our whole project of rescuing Marion. Of course that restaurant where she appeared must be watched, but not by a wild-eyed youth rushing around in a manner calculated to focus the eyes of every spectator upon him."

I knew that he was purposely rubbing it in in order to reduce Ronald to obedience I also knew that it was a job which had to be done, but I felt keen pity for the boy as I saw the humiliated flush on his cheeks and the anguished frustration in his eyes.

"I am now going to map out a campaign for following up this clue to Marion's whereabouts," my father went on. "If you can promise me to control yourself sufficiently so that you can obey orders implicitly, and do nothing on your own when there is a superior officer, so to speak, within reach, I will permit you to join the hunt for her. If you cannot bring yourself to make that promise, you will stay here, under guard, while the search goes on."

"Oh, sir, forgive me!" Ronald burst out, overwhelmed by this combination of promise and threat. "I'll promise anything—anything—if you'll let me help!"

My father's grimly tightened lips relaxed into one of his rare smiles.

"I was sure you'd see it this way," he said. "And, of course, you'll be permitted to help."

"Oh, thank you!" Ronald cried fervently, and my father turned to me.

"As it is exceedingly unlikely that Marion and her escorts will go back to that restaurant today, we have a little breathing space before beginning our preparations," he said. "And I think the first thing on our program is to find out what Marion wrote on the paper inside the one she gave the waiter."

"I can show you what she wrote," I began hesitatingly, "but I think it would be useless until—"

"You mean," he interrupted, "that it is couched in the code she and Mary used?"

"Yes, I think it is," I answered

"Then we won't waste time here" he said quickly. "Will you please telephone Mary at once and tell her the four of us are coming over? She will know the errand must be important without your saying so."

That he was considering Milner's listening posts, I knew, as I went to the telephone, and I tried to make my voice casual as I greeted Mary.

"Are you too tired for visitors?" I asked.

"Not if they're interesting!" she retorted pertly.

"You'll have to be the judge of that," I told her. "Father, Dicky, Ronald and I, want to come over."

Katharine Will Remain.

I knew that Katharine, by my father's wish would stay in the balcony suite, so that it should not be left alone.

"Those names pass muster," Mary drawled. 'Come on over. I have a great thought! Noel and I were just about to order luncheon May we not order for the rest of you also"

"In your own phraseology," I told her, "hold everything till we get there, which will be in about five minutes. Then we can decide"

'You mean, not even put in our own order?" she queried

'That was my meaning," I told her with a little laugh.

'Okay," she answered. "Neither Noel nor I will breathe, let alone talk, until you get here"

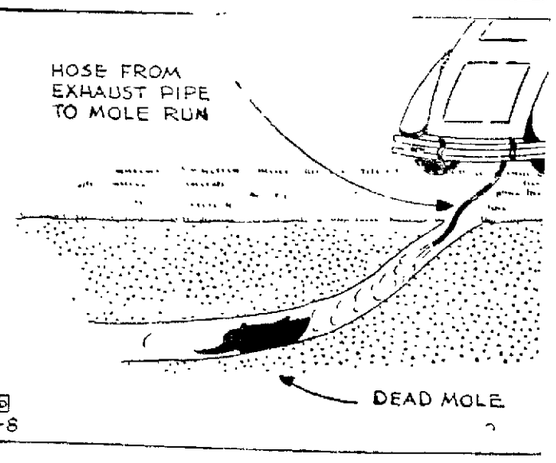
Today's VICTORY GARDEN-GRAPH



How to Make War on Moles In Victory Garden.

By DEAN HALLIDAY
Released by Central Press Ass'n.

Moles made life miserable for some Victory gardeners this summer. If these pernicious pests plagued you, take time now to make a war of extermination upon them.

If your Victory garden was made upon newly turned sod land this year, it is possible that an abundance of wireworms, cut worms, beetles and other insects upon which moles feed attracted the underground saboteurs. Continued cultivation of the soil and consequent killing of the insect population will perhaps tend to discourage the visits of the moles.

As illustrated in the accompanying Garden-Graph, an effective way to get rid of moles is to asphyxiate them with carbon monoxide gas in their runways.

To use this method of elimination against moles, attach a rubber hose to the exhaut pipe of your automobile The joint can be made fairly tight with electrician's tape. Insert the other end of the hose into the mole's run and pack a damp cloth tightly around the place where it enters the soil to concentrate the fumes in the soil Start the motor and let it run for a few minutes. The deadly fumes will penetrate 50 or more feet along the runs if the runs are taken to repeat the dose in place further for the runway.

HOROSCOPE

For Thursday, September 9.

A most propitious time for forging ahead to cherished goals, will define its programs and well organized plans for promotion, favors, preferment or any form of cooperation desired from employers superiors, friends or those in authority. This holds for business as well as personal life, where social and family standing may prove a practical asset. However, there is menace from reckless, impetuous or erratic moves or behaviour that might jeopardize the worthiest efforts. Make changes, travel and promote plans with discretion, moderation and acumen, and all may be surprisingly accelerated in business life. But be tactful in private or emotional relations, which are under adverse forecast.

Those whose birthday it is are encouraged to make well organized and constructive plans for progress and fulfillment of high ambitions by proper approach to those in power and prestige, employers, superiors or those who might prove friendly to personal objectives. But use finesse and tact and not an erratic, over-forceful, reckless or impetuous approach, which might prove futile Similar methods should be used to preserve happiness in the family.

Shine 'Em Up, Lady?

TOE SHINE: Newest idea in foot care.

By BETTY CLARKE
AP Beauty Editor

Those two little feet that have been working overtime at U.S.O. dances need special care.

Feet have been woefully neglected as far as beauty treatments go. Girls have been concentrating on hair, facials and body massage with little consideration as to what was taking place inside their shoes.

But now, with everybody leg conscious, feet have suddenly come into their own. A Fifth avenue salon has opened a room for the exclusive treatment of feet and legs. There are attractice bootblack benches perched on a pedestal where a girl can get her feet masaged, pedicured and shined. The treatment is rounded out with mentholated foot cream, lotion and foot powder. When you leave this room, appropriately named "At the Sign of the Painted Stocking," you feel as if your feet have suddenly been winged.

For those who cannot find a salon available or afford foot treatments, there is a little foot kit containing all the preparations necessary for a home treatment.

When massaging the feet at home, start at the toes and massage each toe with a rotary movement strengthening the toe muscles. Hold your foot in one hand and massage underneath at the metatarsal with knuckles of the other hand. Keep working up from toes to ankles with thumbs on top of feet and fingers beneath. Then, massage the back of your heel and ankle.

Neglected feet often make for unhappy faces. so treat yourself to some extra foot care this summer.

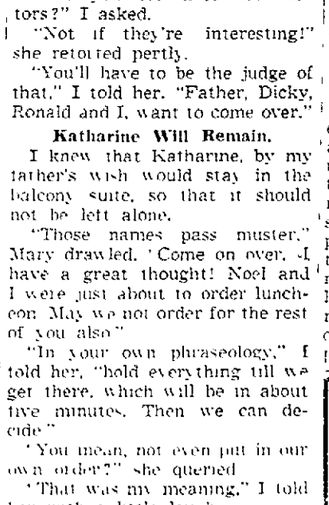
"The Authority on Authorities"

MISSING AN END PLAY

There are various ways whereby a declarer may mess up his effort to make a lead-throwing end-play. One is by failing to go through the proper preparation to eliminate, from his holdings or those of the defenders, the suits which should be taken out. Another is by playing in such a way as to leave the opponents the two middle cards which come between the upper and lower cards of a tenace he holds in some suit.



(Dealer. North East-West vulnerable.)

North	East	South	West
Pass	Pass	1 ♣	1 ♦
2 ♣	Pass	4 ♣	Pass
5 ♣	Pass	Pass	Dbl

At one duplicate table West opened the spade K, then led the Q. which South ruffed. Making the contract clearly depended on avoiding two diamond losers, so an end-play was indicated. South scored two top clubs, the second one in dummy, eliminated spades by ruffing the J. got the hearts out by taking the A, K and Q, then led the diamond 9. East tried to make it hard by not covering with the 10. but south had nerve enough to play his 3, hoping the 9 would force the K or Q. When it did, West had to pitch into the A-J or else lead a suit which South could ruff in dummy while discarding his spade J. Having only diamonds, it was that suit, but South didn't care.

At another table, play was the same except that East made it easy by covering the diamond 9 with the 10, whereupon the J went on, making the dummy's 8 a vital part of the end-play. At still another table, when East played low on the 9, South put on the J and so was beaten, as then the diamond 7 enabled the 10 to force the A, so that the J lost to the K. At still another table, South neglected to ruff out the spade J, so, when West was put in with the diamond, he could return a spade, which South had to ruff, leaving him another diamond loser. Still another declarer took out all of the dummy's clubs before putting West in with a diamond, and also left West with a spade to return.

Tomorrow's Problem.

After North and South had stuck in bids of their red suits, what is their soundest defense on this deal against 4-Spades by East.
